by MONICA WILCH PERIN

She didn't have a wagon to stand on but her pitch had a ring reminiscent of the old-time traveling medicine show barker. A cluster of curious potential converts was gathered around the woman, who was peddling ginseng tea at the Chicago Trade Exposition.

Ginseng appears to be the latest health food fad to sweep the country. Yet the term "latest fad" seems somehow inappropriate to describe a root that has been used by the Chinese for medicinal purposes since ancient times.

The botanical name for the ginseng plant comes from the Greek word for "panacea," which is an understatement of the claims made for ginseng.

Today

It is touted as a cure for stress, nervousness, sexual impotency, heart disease, heartburn, high blood pressure, tiredness, depression, insomnia, double vision, diarrhea, constipation, creaking joints, gray hair, baldness, old age and just about any other complaint you might have.

Advertising literature for ginseng quotes various studies, ranging from the plausible to the ridiculous, done in other countries including Sweden, Soviet Union, England, Switzerland, Germany, Bulgaria, Japan and the Bahamas. Last year many of these researchers gathered in Seoul, Korea, for the first international ginseng conference.

There apparently has been little

Walnut St. rail crossing to open after 9-yr. wait

The railroad crossing between Ridge and Walnut avenues in Arlington Heights is slated to open this week, after nine years of delay.

Chicago and North Western Ry. officials Friday said the crossing would open this week after the signal lights are in working order.

Village officials first began planning the Ridge-Walnut crossing in 1967 to alleviate congestion on the four downtown Arlington Heights crossings.

THE CROSSING finally was approved in 1970, following several hearings by the Illinois Commerce Commission. At that time, the railroad objected to the plan for the crossing.

A three-year special assessment battle followed, which sparked a later disagreement over right-of-way compensation. The railroad insisted that the village should pay $17,000 for the right-of-way across the tracks, but the village refused, contending that it was not a regular part of grade crossing agreements.

The village board in 1970 put $10,000 into a special escrow account until the right-of-way compensation question could be settled in court.

The commerce commission's order that the village pay the $17,000 was appealed by the village, but the case was never assigned a court date.

In January, the village completed its share of the work on the crossing — approaches and stoplights — but the railway said it was unable to complete the project because of a lack of hot-mix asphalt, which is not produced by asphalt plants in winter months.

$48 million budget gets review today in Dist. 214

A $48 million tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year will be reviewed by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education today.

The budget calls for a 6.58 per cent increase in expenditures from last year's $45 million budget.

The district anticipates receiving $47 million in revenue this year from property taxes, state aid and other sources, a 4.9 per cent increase from last year's $45 million.

Included in the revenue projections is $11 million from state aid, a 14.4 per cent increase from the $9.8 million received last year. The district also expects to receive $28.7 million from property taxes.

A breakdown of the budget by the five major funds — the education, building, transportation, bond and interest, and municipal retirement funds — will not be available until the board meeting.

The board will review the budget and set the date for a public hearing at 8 p.m. Monday at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

$570 in equipment stolen from auto

Thieves caused $150 damage breaking into an auto in Mount Prospect early Sunday morning and stole goods valued at $570, police reported.

Police said thieves used a bolt cutter to gain entry to a vehicle owned by Steve Pfeifer, 1826 Dogwood Ln., at the Pfeifer home between 2 and 7:30 a.m. Sunday, and stole a Citizens' Band radio, a stereo tape player, apes and two speakers.

THE LONG TREK back to the blackboards, desks and teachers is only a month away for most students. Glen Chelvis, 10, takes advantage of one of his few remaining free days, scaling playground equipment in Rolling Meadows.

After starting fares

Commuter bus riders down 17%

Ridership on the Buffalo Grove commuter bus service dropped 17 per cent last week during the first week of 40-cent fares.

Claude Luisada, a member of the Buffalo Grove Transportation Committee, which oversees the service between Buffalo Grove and the Arlington Heights train station, said an average of 168 passengers rode the bus the first four days of last week, compared with 202 the week before.

He said a peak ridership of 213 was reached July 25.

"The ridership fell slightly (last week) but I think it was for other reasons than the fares," Luisada said.

TWO RUNS were missed Monday, causing ridership for that day to fall to 138, he said. He also attributed the lower passenger rate to a rainy Tuesday and a heavy vacation period.

Luisada said the ridership is expected to increase as the summer vacation season ends and more information is released to the public on the route.

He said the North Suburban Mass Transit District, which operates the service, is considering adding another bus to the route and offering a 10-15 per cent discount for regular riders.

Luisada said the fare may be reduced from 40 to 35 cents later this year if funds are released following court approval of the Regional Transportation Authority budget.

Ridership could reach 300 by early next year if another bus is put on the route, Luisada said. Several months ago, officials were hoping for an average ridership of 158 passengers per day to guarantee full RTA funding.

40% reduction in electricity use

IBI, Edison investigate meter tampering

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Reports of tampering with Commonwealth Edison Co. electric meters throughout the Chicago metropolitan area are being probed by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, The Herald has learned.

Robert W. Banks, an agent in the IBI's special investigations division, disclosed few specifics and refused to say when the investigation began. Banks said, however, the "active investigation regarding meter tampering" — sought by Commonwealth Edison — encompasses Chicago and its suburbs. "The Northwest suburbs are part of the Chicago metropolitan area," he said. Banks is heading the investigation.

Commonwealth Edison officials, reluctant to discuss the investigation, said the problem surfaced about March 1. "In our normal testing of meters we had come across a few that had been tampered with," said

See related story, Page 5

Jack J. Stephens, the company's district superintendent in the Northwest suburbs.

OFFICIALS SUSPECT meters are slowed down to record up to 40 per cent reductions in monthly electricity use. They estimated the annual loss to the company could amount to "thousands of dollars," but would not say exactly how much has been lost through meter tampering.

The company's electric meters are read once monthly at commercial establishments and once every two months in residential buildings. Commonwealth Edison serves nearly three million customers in Illinois.

"We found a lot of restaurants but not exclusively restaurants" with altered meters, said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in

Commonwealth Edison's meter department. Sachs said meter tampering is not confined to the Northwest suburbs. "It's the entire metropolitan area," he said.

Sachs said up to a 40 per cent drop in electricity use has been cited on certain monthly electric bills. He estimated the subsequent decline in the bill could net an annual savings of up to $10,000 for some restaurants, although the amounts may vary widely.

"The pattern on bills doesn't vary that much. It's easy to tell if there's a 25, 30 or 40 per cent drop in usage," Sachs said.

THERE ARE SEVERAL pieces of equipment on an electric meter that are adjustable. "The meter can be forced to misoperate," Stephens said. "The primary way, but not the only way it is done, is to slow the meter down."

Stephens said meter readers, although they are not experts, are the best detectors of tampering. "The meter men can work the dial and feel whether or not it's slipping," he said. "If it's slipping, someone's been in there playing around."

When asked if meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring, Sachs told The Herald, "Some of it may be. There are rumors that it's national."

"There are a lot of people around — electricians, for instance — that know what they're doing. It can be attractive to kids as well. It is not that difficult unfortunately. We can't have people doing this on an organized basis."

NEITHER COMMONWEALTH Edison official would confirm that the IBI is involved in an investigation. They said they were conducting their own "intense" companywide probe with the support of the Illinois Commerce Commission and a "professional" law enforcement agency.

"We have our own investigative forces, employees of the company, that can conduct an investigation if we direct them to," Sachs said.

The IBI has made no arrests, Banks said. He said if a suspect is caught tampering with electric meters he could be prosecuted for theft or conspiracy to commit theft. "If you had a meter in your home and you knew how to gear it down, you'd be using a lot more (electricity) than recorded," Banks explained, saying meter tamperers are guilty of stealing electrical energy.

For the most part, commercial meters are installed inside buildings. "If they're tampered with, there's only one conclusion," Stephens said. "It's your building." He said, however, it's impossible to prove meter tampering unless someone is caught in the act.

Cause sought in fatal B-25 plane crash

by DAVE IBATA
Investigators Sunday sorted through the wreckage of two houses and a B-25 bomber near Midway Airport to seek the cause of a crash Friday that claimed the life of a 52-year-old Arlington Heights pilot.
Kenneth Schons, of 1910 N. Burke Dr., Arlington Heights, and two others died in the fiery crash of the rebuilt World War II bomber shortly after the plane departed Midway on a routine check flight at 3:25 p.m. Friday.
The two engines of the 30,000-pound plane caught fire before the aircraft crashed into two homes three-quarters of a mile west of the airport, killing Schons and flight instructor John Worley, 46, of Medina, Ohio, and fatally injuring homeowner Elsie Rabideau, 60, of 6158 S. Moody Ave., Chicago.

MRS. RABIDEAU DIED seven hours after the crash of massive head and chest injuries and internal injuries at Cook County Hospital, Chicago.
Homeowner Sophie Glab, 33, of 6159 S. Melvina Ave., Chicago, suffered head injuries in the crash and was taken to Holy Cross Hospital, Chicago, where she was reported out of the intensive care section and in good condition Sunday afternoon.

Schons Friday was being reviewed by Worley prior to his Federal Aviation Administration flight test in the North American B-25 "Mitchell," a bomber rebuilt by Air Chicago Freight Airlines for civilian use.
Schons, chief pilot and vice president of Air Chicago, 5036 W. 63rd St., Chicago, is survived by wife, Irene and sons Ronald R., 24, and Robert R., 22; and Sharon A. Schons, 19.
SCHONS WAS A RETIRED U.S. Air Force Lieutenant Colonel, and held commercial, instrument and instructor pilot ratings. He retired from the Air Force in 1970 and moved his family from Dayton, Ohio, to Arlington Heights.
The Schons family are members of

Kenneth Schons

St. Edna's Catholic Church, 2525 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.
Visitation for Schons will be from noon to 10 p.m. Monday at Colonial Funeral Home, 6250 N. Milwaukee Ave., Chicago. A funeral Mass will be said at St. Edna's at 11 a.m. Tuesday, and burial will follow at All Saints Cemetery, Des Plaines.
Air Chicago spent two years and $100,000 rebuilding the B-25 for use as a passenger carrier, promotional plane and air show entry, said Emmett Stovall, president and chief pilot of National Air Commuter Airlines and friend of Schons.
AIR CHICAGO "had replaced every nut and bolt in it," Stovall said. "I know they went over it with a toothbrush."
Stovall said, "I was itching to get into that plane and asked him (Schons) several times to take me up. When he'd go to start that plane, I'd say, 'Are you going to take me along on this one?' This time he said, 'No, not this time around. Some other time.' Those were his last words to me."
Shortly after the plane took off, Stovall said, "I looked back and saw smoke. I saw he was on fire and could see the blaze coming from his left engine. It was really pouring out."

Soon both engines were ablaze, Stovall said. The plane turned, apparently to return to the airport, he said.
"SMOKE WAS STREAMING from the plane, and then it went down directly — smoke streaming all the way," Stovall said. "If he had another 30 seconds, he would have made it back to the airport."
Schons' last flight lasted only five minutes, Stovall said.
Rudolf Kapustin, chief investigator at the crash site for the National Transportation Safety Board, said Sunday 14 investigators from the safety board and FAA were sorting through the wreckage of the plane, interviewing witnesses and examining maintenance records of the B-25.
Reports to be submitted to the safety board within the next six months will cover airplane operations, structure, systems, powerplant, eyewitnesses' statements and aircraft records, Kapustin said.

Suburban digest Arraignment today in Monoson case

Former Wheeling Village Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson today will be arraigned in Cook County Circuit Court Criminal Division on charges of bribery and official misconduct. Monoson, who ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket, was indicted July 29 by a Cook County Grand Jury. Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said Monoson is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation request by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling. Carey said Monoson allegedly asked George Carpin, president of the firm, for a $10,000 "no collateral" loan in return for Monoson using his influence to obtain a zoning variation and occupancy permit for the company.

Bus ridership down 6.6%

Ridership on the intracity bus system in Des Plaines dropped 6.6 per cent between April and June compared with the first three months of the year. Ridership dropped from 14,453 between January and March, to 13,497 in the second quarter. However, an official of the North Suburban Mass Transit District said he is not disappointed. "Frankly, the local routes are doing better than expected because this time of year is the real doldrums," Joseph DiJohn, executive director of NORTAN said. "Usually ridership falls off as much as 20 per cent, but it hasn't and that's a good sign. I'm not discouraged."

Fare imposed, ridership drops

Ridership on the Buffalo Grove commuter bus service dropped 17 per cent last week during the first week of 40-cent fares. Claude Luisada, a member of the Buffalo Grove Transportation Committee which oversees the service, said an average of 188 passengers rode the bus last week compared with 202 the week before, adding officials were hoping for a ridership average of 158 passengers per day to guarantee continued Regional Transportation funding. He said a peak ridership of 213 was reached July 26.

Prospect Hts. mulls Rob Roy unit

Plans for a proposed 550-home subdivision on the site of the Rob Roy golf course are being considered by the Prospect Heights Plan Commission. Centex Homes of Illinois, Inc. has asked the city to consider annexing the 200-acre golf course to the city. The plan commission is scheduled to review preliminary plans this month and conduct a public hearing on the proposal. Centex officials say they plan to construct ranch and two-story houses selling for about $70,000 each.

Thanks to jet gun

Flu shots will be 'quite painless'

by KURT BAER

When millions of Americans line up for swine flu vaccinations this fall, they will become intimately acquainted with a modern medical weapon called the jet gun.

Complete with pistol grip and trigger, the jet gun's ammunition will be immunizing liquid. The target is your arm.

There will be about 75 injector guns in use during the 12 days scheduled by the state for swine flu vaccinations in Cook County, probably sometime in October.

THE GUNS have the technical capability to vaccinate 1,000 people an hour, though the figure more likely will be about 600 an hour, says Sherwood Zimmerman, coordinator of the swine flu immunization program for the Illinois Dept. of Public Health.

Jet guns generally are considered a less painful weapon than the needle. The vaccine is shot from the gun under high pressure and makes its own hole in the skin, Zimmerman says.

"Some people feel it, others don't. It depends on how close the shot gets to a nerve ending. But generally, it's quite painless," he says.

The gun also is "very, very easy to operate," Zimmerman says, and that is important because of the large numbers of nonprofessional volunteers that will staff each immunization clinic.

BECAUSE THERE is no needle penetration, the threat of hepatitis is lessened, he said.

The guns are being supplied to the state by the federal government which ordered 1,400 of them initially at a cost of $1,318,915. Additional guns, if needed, will cost $935 each.

The Center for Disease Control, Atlanta, Ga., selected Vernitron Medical Products Inc., Carlstadt, N.J., to supply jet injectors. Never before has the jet gun been put to such extensive use as the role planned for it in the swine flu vaccination program.

Guns were used during the Salk polio vaccination campaign in the 1950s and are used by the Army.

"No other form comes close to the efficiency, reliability and efficacy of jet injector vaccinations," says Dr. J. Donald Millar, the center's coordinator of the antiswine flu effort.

ZIMMERMAN SAID the guns are "very versatile and can be used for giving all kinds of injections." The public health department will keep the injectors it gets from the federal government and distribute them throughout the state for future use, he said.

The heart of the injectors is a strong spring that is cocked by hydraulic pressure. The operator presses a foot pedal once to supply the power for each shot. When the trigger is pulled, the spring strikes a piston which forces vaccine through a small nozzle and into the arm. Various size vials of vaccine, holding from 10 to 100 shots, are fitted inside the gun.

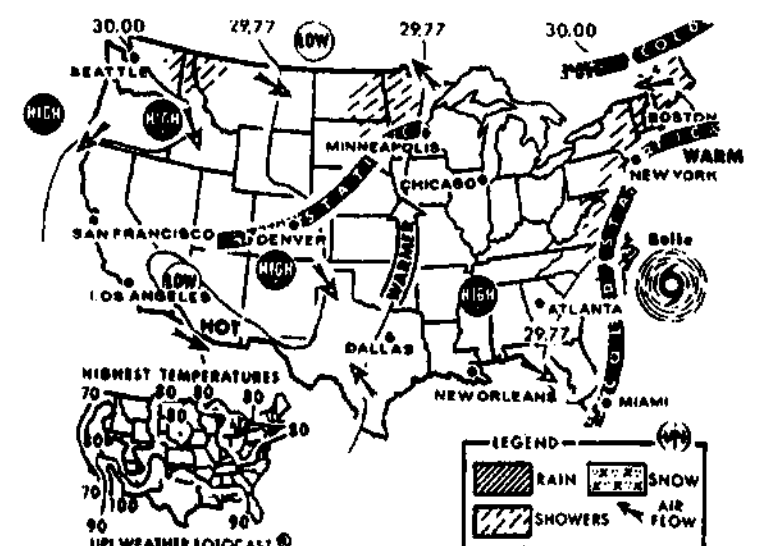

An industrial accident 100 years ago gave birth to the idea of the modern jet gun. French workers in the 19th Century complained that when using grease guns they sometimes injected themselves rather than their intended target.

Aaron Ismach, an Army civilian employee at Ft. Dietrich, Md., and Dr. Abram Benson, now dean of the medical school at the University of Kentucky, are credited with developing the gun now in use. They produced seven prototypes in 1939-60 with a sapphire nozzle nearly impossible to wear out.

Zimmerman said the state does not have enough injector guns to do all the vaccinations at one time. The public health department has set up different regions across the state. Each region will have use of the guns for about 10 days.

Dr. Caldwell appointed to high-risk nursery

Dr. Candace C. Caldwell has been appointed to the specialty staff in the high-risk nursery at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

Officially known as a neonatologist, a pediatrician who specializes in the care of newborn babies with problems at birth, Dr. Caldwell will serve as associate director of the high-risk nursery which is capable of caring for 16 babies.

She comes to Lutheran General from the Medical University of South Carolina Teaching Hospitals where she spent the past four years as a pediatric resident and neonatology fellow.

She will be responsible for caring for babies referred from other hospitals, handling telephone consultations from other hospitals and teaching medical students, residents and nursing students at Lutheran General.

The hospital's high-risk nursery was established in 1972 to care for critically ill infants. Babies are frequently transferred to the unit from throughout the Northwest suburban area.

New front opened in 'Legion Disease'

DR. LEONARD BACHMAN

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The death toll climbed to 27 Sunday as state and federal scientists sought for a second week to identify the American Legion mystery illness.

The latest dead were Dennis Boyle, 60, of Luzerne County and Harold Davis, 66, of Philadelphia — both of whom died Sunday morning. Officials have confirmed 152 cases of the illness.

Health Secretary Dr. Leonard Bachman said Sunday that no new cases of the illness have been reported since last Tuesday, and investigators have yet to document the spread of the disease to "secondary" victims in what they call "The Pennsylvania Incident."

At the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta and in state laboratories in Philadelphia, toxicologists and virologists continued extensive testing of samples from the victims of the disease in their search for its cause.

Epidemiologists — disease detectives who use statistics instead of chemicals and microscopes — opened a new front in the battle to identify the killer disease by circulating questionnaires to all who attended the convention.

The questionnaires were distributed to all 931 Pennsylvania American Legion posts in Pennsylvania. They ask those who attended the convention to complete the forms by Monday night and return them to the health department.

"We are trying to form a very detailed profile of all of the conventioners," said Dr. William E. Parkin, the state's chief epidemiologist. "We want to get a statistical profile of those who became ill and those who did not, and then look for any significant differences."

The toxicologists are working under the assumption that some kind of poison — either natural or man-made — will ultimately be identified as the agent that caused the illnesses and deaths.

But Bachman and other health officials were not optimistic that a poison would be found.

"If we postulate a single exposure, which we're now postulating, it's hard to pinpoint a chemical material that would cause that," Bachman said at a briefing.

The investigators believe that all of the American Legion members and their friends and wives who were stricken by the disease may have contracted it at one time and in one location.

However, no evidence has been found to support that supposition. Parkin noted that the epidemiological survey has identified nine firm cases who attended the convention for one day only, but he said no conclusions could be drawn.

The illness seemed to hit after a three or four day delay, according to the investigators, who presented a chart plotting the course of the illness showing that it peaked sometime between July 25 and July 28.

That factor tended to lead one toxicologist, state consultant Dr. Richard Chon, to conclude that if the outbreak was caused by a poison, it is not a common poison and follows an unusual pattern.

"It is awfully difficult to say at this point exactly what compound might be involved, or if it is in fact a compound, or if in fact we're dealing with a group of chemical agents," Cohn said.

Weekend tests designed to locate strange strains of viruses failed to provide proof such a virus was at play, said Dr. Jay Satz, head of the health department's virology section.

However, he said that one complex virus study was just beginning and there is a possibility that the investigators could locate a freak virus that escaped earlier detection.

That test involved blood samples taken from victims of the disease after they recovered. The investigators are looking for antibodies that may have been formed in response to a virus attack.

Satz and Bachman stressed all tests for viral agents are still under way and will continue until a cause is found for the illness.

Carter orders campaign money 'wrongdoing probe'

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — Jimmy Carter, saying "obviously it hurts me politically," acknowledged Sunday his organization paid campaign money that allegedly wound up in the pockets of black preachers in California.

The Democratic presidential nominee said, however, that he did not believe his campaign workers knew about the practice ahead of time and that he had issued "strict orders" disapproving of such activity.

Carter said he asked campaign treasurer Robert Lipschutz to investigate if there was any evidence of wrongdoing on the part of his staff.

The Los Angeles Times reported Sunday that the Carter campaign paid $5,000 in "street money" to four black preachers in the San Francisco area before the June 8 California primary. The Times also said it discovered instances during the final three primary campaigns in California, Ohio and New Jersey where Carter campaign funds spent in black communities were not accompanied by the required receipts.

Answering reporters' questions in his front yard after attending Sunday school and church, Carter said his campaign held rallies in 15 to 20 churches, almost all in the black community, and paid heavy expenses for heating, distributing literature and cleaning up.

He also said the campaign often hired black and white leaders for a week or so to organize rallies at a salary of $25 to $50 a week plus expenses.

"That's a completely legitimate thing," Carter said.

Carter said he knew nothing about the alleged incidents in California.

"I don't have any doubts," he said. "There are those who keep part of the money, both black people and white people. That's something that's almost impossible to prevent."

In other political news:

With the outcome of the fight for the Republican presidential nomination still in doubt one week before the GOP convention, contention Sunday was over the No. 2 spot.

John Connally, calling his critics "Republicans For Cannibalism," said Sunday, "It is highly questionable that I would accept the vice presidency if it was offered to me."

Commerce Secretary Elliot Richardson said he is under consideration and wants to be. He declined to comment on any liabilities Connally would have because of a milk fund scandal, but said he himself could "help assure that Watergate is not an issue."

President Ford, in an interview with United Press International and the Associated Press, said Connally is among a dozen he is considering, including Ronald Reagan, who has ruled out accepting; Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, who said he didn't want to be considered; Anne Armstrong, ambassador to Great Britain; Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee, and Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, the Senate's only black.

"I won't go to the extreme, either

Ford — like Connally, but not as harshly — criticized GOP Reps. Thomas Railsback and Paul Findley of Illinois and William Cohen of Maine for publicly urging him to drop Connally because the possible Watergate connection.

"Their comments, Ford said, are 'not helpful for party unity' and they should give their views to him privately."

Connally, appearing on ABC's Issues and Answers, used the congressmen's initials to describe them as "RFC: Republicans for Cannibalism." He said, "I think it is highly questionable that I would accept the vice presidency if it was offered to me."

Richardson, on NBC's "Meet the Press," said, "I'm certainly one of those who are being considered. I have been asked to submit a set of, or at least assemble, financial data and so on in case the field should narrow down and still include me."

He said it wouldn't be appropriate to comment on Connally because he himself wants the No. 2 spot. Richardson, who served Nixon as secretary of HEW, secretary of defense and attorney general before quitting rather than fire the Watergate prosecutor, said he could help "maximize the affirmative side of the Nixon and Ford administration record — to put it the other way, to help assure that Watergate is not an issue."

DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL nominee Jimmy Carter doesn't seem to impress young Braden Bell, 10-months-old, from Florida, as several hundred people gathered outside Plains Baptist Church to greet the former Georgia governor and his family after they attended Sunday services.

Sunday school bus hit by train; 9 die

A Burlington Northern freight train in Stratton, Neb. Sunday rammed into a Church of Christ bus picking up children for Sunday school classes, killing a minister, his wife and seven youngsters. Eight other small children aboard the bus were seriously injured. Six of the victims died in Stratton and three others died en route to St. Joseph's Hospital in Denver. Among those killed were the driver of the bus, the Rev. Thomas B. Nerren, 44, and his wife, Shirene, 31. State Patrol Sgt. M. D. Grant said the warning lights at the intersection were working at the time. He said he could not determine the cause of the crash.

Mobster's body found in oil drum

A body Florida fishermen found inside a floating oil drum in Dumbfoundling Bay was identified Sunday as that of John Roselli, a missing mobster who once told a Senate committee the CIA recruited him to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro. Officials said the body had at least one bullet hole and that Roselli, 69, apparently had been the victim of a "gangland-style killing." Roselli disappeared from his sister's home in Plantation, Fla., July 28. His car was later found abandoned at Miami International Airport.

Indictments in Chowchilla case seen

A California defense attorney said Sunday he expects a grand jury indictment to be returned against three young men accused of kidnapping 26 Chowchilla children. A new grand jury was to be chosen this week in Madera County, where Chowchilla is located. "I anticipate an indictment," attorney William Gagen, who represents two of the defendants, James and Richard Schoenfeld, said in the San Francisco suburb of Danville.

Thailand ferry capsizes; 27 killed

An overloaded ferry piloted by an unlicensed and allegedly drunk skipper capsized early Sunday in southern Thailand, drowning 27 persons with another 30 missing and feared dead, police said. An unconfirmed report said about 20 foreigners, including some Americans, were on the ferry which sank in the Gulf of Thailand, about 350 miles south of Bangkok. However, police said no foreigners were among the known victims. Police said 27 bodies, including a mother clutching her 4-month-old baby in her arms, were recovered. Another 30 persons were reported missing, they said.

Hurricane warnings go up in N.C.

MIAMI (UPI) — A hurricane warning was issued Sunday for North Carolina's Outer Banks and a watch was posted for the northern east coast to Massachusetts as hurricane Belle slowly churned northward along the Atlantic coast carrying 100 mph winds.

The warning flags were posted from Kitty Hawk to Cape Lookout, N.C. The watch, a preliminary caution, included Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey and the New York City metropolitan area, up to Merrimack River, Mass. A watch was dis-

Sunday evening the season's first Atlantic hurricane was centered about 400 miles east of Jacksonville, Fla., near latitude 30.2 north, longitude 75.6 west. It was expected to continue a northward course at 15 m.p.h. or slightly faster.

Forecasters predicted increased winds and tides would be felt beginning Monday morning in the warning area. Tides were expected to be five to eight feet above normal by midday Monday.

Residents and tourists began leaving North Carolina's Outer Banks vacation area Sunday with officials reporting heavy traffic to the north and west. The National Park Service's five campgrounds were ordered closed and emptied by dark and Marine Corps officials began moving aircraft inland from Camp LeJeune.

"At this time, we're looking for landfall just southwest of Cape Hatteras by late afternoon (Monday)," said National Weather Service forecaster Wallace DeMaurice in Raleigh.

"We think the effects will be felt tomorrow (Monday) morning and by afternoon it will be coming through," he said.

"Our concern right now is that tourists might get trapped on the North islands, because when a storm approaches the Outer Banks, they put the ferries away up there," said Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center.

Fla. ship agent reported that a Tampa, Fla., freighter was worried about a commercial tug towing a barge loaded with valuable cargo, which was last reported early Sunday near the center of the storm. The tug and barge cargo were not identified.

Catholic pilgrims conclude Eucharistic Congress

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — With the words "the Church of Jesus Christ is assembled for worship" spoken in 27 languages, some 100,000 Roman Catholic pilgrims Sunday concluded their 41st International Eucharistic Congress.

15 injured by bomb blast in Cairo building

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — An Egyptian working for Libyan intelligence exploded two bombs in a busy 12-story government building in the heart of Cairo Sunday, wounding himself and 14 other persons, including several policemen, a government spokesman announced.

Maj. Gen. Hassan Abu Basha, assistant interior minister, said the bombs were hidden in the lavatory on the 5th floor, which houses the offices of the Social Affairs Ministry. They went off, two hours apart while the building teemed with thousands of employees and visitors.

The offices of various ministries are located in the "Al Mogamea" building in Al Tahrir (Liberation) Square — the largest in Cairo — close to the Arab League headquarters and the Nile Hilton Hotel.

The agent, identified as Emdad Edin Abdullah, was injured on the face and hands, and arrested before he could leave the building, Abu Basha said.

Although Abdullah is Egyptian-born, Abu Basha said, the explosions were "organized by the Libyan intelligence service."

Braving the threat of rain and buoyed by the voice of Pope Paul VI, Catholics filled John F. Kennedy stadium for a spectacular celebration of the Statio Orbis Mass — known as the "gathering of nations" or "world assembly" mass.

"The mystery of the Eucharist is above all a personal mystery," said the Pope, speaking from Bolzena, Italy, via satellite. "It is personal because the Eucharist is meant for each of us," he said, adding that it is "accessible to every human being . . . who opens to Him (Christ) the doors of faith and love."

President Ford also briefly addressed the pilgrims. He called the Congress an "inspiring demonstration of all the world's hunger for peace and understanding."

Ford drew sustained applause from the audience when he told them "we share your concern about the increasing irreverence for life," a reference to the Catholic Church's implacable opposition to abortion.

The reaction by the largest crowd Ford has addressed this year had the President smiling. His speech was televised in some areas.

The Catholic Church opposes abortion, and Ford has said the Supreme Court went too far in allowing women to have abortions, though he has not endorsed a constitutional amendment against abortions. He did not mention abortion specifically, however.

"The supreme value of every person to whom life is given by God is a belief that comes from the Holy Scriptures, confirmed by all the great leaders of the church, Ford continued. "Our commitment to the unique role of the family relationship is also basic to our faith."

The eight days of liturgical celebrations included some 60 masses and brought an estimated one million people from 40 countries to various aspects of the Congress aimed at fostering the spiritual renewal of the church throughout the world.

What's good for the goose is good for gander: Bhutto

Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto told Secretary of State Henry Kissinger Sunday that Pakistan should get the same treatment from Washington as Iran, which just agreed to buy $10 million in American arms. "What is good for the goose is good for the gander. If the United States considers Iran's security is so important to the vital interests of the world . . . it must come to the conclusion that the same applies to Pakistan," Bhutto said.

Elizabeth Ray, self-described mistress of Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, was sued by a Maryland attorney who claims she has not paid a $3,456 legal bill. Atty. Monroe J. Mizel charged in the suit filed in Arlington (Va.) General District Court that Miss Ray failed to pay him for legal work between April 12 and May 22. The suit also cites a previous balance of more than $300 and $6.88 in phone bills still owed.

Johnson Van Dyke Grigsby, 91, who has spent his past 66 years behind the bars of the Indiana State Prison on a life sentence, apparently will live out the rest of his days in the prison — contentedly. Grigsby was paroled to a Michigan City nursing home in December of 1974, but after spending 17 months there and at another nursing home, he returned to the prison voluntarily last May. Grigsby became despondent while under outside care. He told the parole board he would like his freedom, but that he really doesn't mind staying in prison either.

'CIA considered fronting for Ford'

The CIA considered using a front organization owned by the late billionaire Howard Hughes to pass along 1968 campaign funding to Gerald Ford and 30 other conservative congressmen, Playboy Magazine said Sunday in a copyrighted story. Playboy said it was not able to determine why the CIA selected the congressmen for funding, whether the money was ever passed along, or if the politicians ever knew they were chosen. Playboy released a copy of a memo it said was delivered to Hughes by one of his top aides, John Meier, who later was forced from the Hughes empire and served as a key source in Playboy's yearlong investigation.

The memo included a list of influential senators and representatives selected for funding, all Republicans, southern Democrats or from Hughes' home state of Nevada, Playboy said. The extent of the funding was unknown. Playboy said the CIA's infiltration of Hughes' Summa Corp. spread to such a degree that it helped lead to the resignation of former President Richard Nixon.

Playboy said numerous money exchanges occurred between Hughes and Nixon, including a much-publicized loan in which $100,000 was funneled to the President through longtime Nixon friend Bebe Rebozo, and it was fear of publicity about Nixon's relationship with Hughes that prompted the Watergate break-in.

3 drown in Wolf Lake

The bodies of three men were pulled Sunday from Wolf Lake in the William W. Powers State Park after they drowned while fishing, authorities said. The dead were identified as Oscar Bailey, 58, his son, Frank, 24, and Jimmy Tye, 44, all of Chicago. South Chicago police Sgt. Mitchell Pizzo said the drownings were witnessed by Oscar Bailey's wife, Mary, 58, and his uncle, Frank Sims, 50.

Sims and Mrs. Bailey told police the men were fishing about 25 feet off shore when Tye started "fooling around" and threw Frank Bailey into the deep water, Pizzo said. Tye, seeing that Frank was drowning, leaped into the deep water to save him but started to sink, Pizzo said. Oscar Bailey then jumped into the deep water to try to rescue his son, but he drowned also, Pizzo said. The Powers State Park is about two miles from the Indiana border.

Teamsters to ask tax rule hold

The Teamsters Central States, Southeast and Southwest areas Pension Fund plans to file a request with the Internal Revenue Service in Washington Monday for a delay in the effective date of an IRS order revoking the fund's tax exempt status, a fund spokesman said Sunday in Chicago. The IRS announced June 25 that the tax exempt status of the $1.4 billion fund was revoked retroactive to Feb. 1, 1966. The IRS later limited the revocability of the revocation so that employers who make contributions in the name of 385,000 Teamster Union members would not be affected from Feb. 1, 1966, through Aug. 31, 1976.

Findley to skip convention

Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., said Sunday he would not attend the Republican national convention as an Illinois delegate for President Ford because of a serious illness to his wife. Findley was at the bedside of his wife, Lucille, Sunday at the Mayo Clinic, where she underwent surgery Friday for removal of an aneurysm on her brain. Mrs. Findley was removed from intensive care Sunday and her husband described her as "doing quite well."

Findley said he had canceled plans to attend next week's GOP convention in Kansas City. He said he understood the 20th District alternate delegate with the highest number of votes would replace him, meaning he probably will be replaced by Bill Cellini of Springfield, Ill., Ford's downstate campaign manager. All four delegates from the 20th District are committed to Ford, who got 60 per cent of the vote in the district in the Illinois primary.

Plane crash hurts area man

A small plane piloted by Achim Freyberg, 36, of Deerfield ran out of gas and crashed landed on the front lawn of a Millwood, N.Y., home Saturday night, police said. Freyberg, the only person aboard, was taken to Northern Westchester Hospital where he was treated for minor cuts and released.

Police said Freyberg was on his way to the Westchester County Airport from Chicago when he ran out of gas and was forced to land.

Just like the men

Women survive service schools

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

Women integrating the nation's service academies gripe as much as the men, miss their hi-fi and junk food about the same and form blisters in numbers probably equal to the men's.

The first women also are surviving the rigors of indoctrination — as are most of the men in the class of 80.

THE FEMALES DERIVE some zest from the knowledge that they are the first wave bending about the last pinnacle of masculinity on the American scene — Annapolis, the Air Force Academy, West Point, The Merchant Marine Academy and the U.S. Coast Guard Academy.

Around 4,000 women and men, the best of an estimated 40,000, applicants started basic training at the academies in late June and early July.

Only at the Merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, N.Y., were the least male student noses out of joint. The Merchant Marine Academy started taking women two years ago.

AS OF TWO days ago, 258 men had dropped out and so had 36 women — about seven and nine per cent respectively. About what the schools expected this far into training.

At the Merchant Marine Academy, the two weeks' indoctrination ended July 27 and classes started. The new females bring to 52 the number of girls in a total student body of 1,000 there.

At the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., both male and female beginners display great staying power — the women are sticking it out better than the men.

THE ATTRITION rate is 2.5 per cent for the women; and 3.41 for the men.

At most academies, officials say applications this year for integration were the highest in years. Annapolis, for example, had 12,000 apply for 1,292 places — double the 1969 level.

The new cadets, midshipmen and airmen get a free college education, a $333 a month allowance, a job upon graduation — and a chance to serve their country.

THE EDUCATION offers more electives than in the past but most students major in engineering, math or science.

The education, the career, all the rest hinge on surviving basic training.

Talks with male and female students, school officials and on the spot observations by UPI reporters show the summer of greatest testing isn't insurmountable. But men as well as women sometime have their doubts.

FOLLOWING ARE highlights of reports from Jane Anderson in New London, Conn.; Pete Kelly in Colorado Springs, Colo.; Alan Shearer in Annapolis, Md.; and Hank Logeman at Kings Point.

MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY
Ivy Barton of New Castle, Del., starting her third year, said, "I've been caught up in the routine and I think I've accomplished more studying than I ever would elsewhere."

As she sees it, male opposition has declined.

Barton says during shipboard training some men were hesitant about letting her carry tools or do certain other heavy work.

"I MADE IT clear that I wanted to be treated like the men, and then I was able to do my job," she said.

Like many of the women at the service academies Barton was active in high school athletics. The strenuous physical exertion required of midshipmen doesn't bother her.

Thomas Jorgenson, of Abercrombie, N.D., a senior, has mixed feelings about the academy going coed.

"AS FAR AS the academy itself goes, I think it's nice to be around girls."

But after going on shipboard duty with a female cadet, he said he can't see a girl being an officer on a merchant ship.

"During the training, the attitude of the men toward the women aboard ship is 'let me do this, you're a girl,'" he said.

"ONCE THE woman becomes an officer this same attitude on the part of the men is going to persist even though the woman doesn't want it that way."

"Women officers assigned to cargo watches will have to boss longshoremen and I can't see that. But I think there will always be shore jobs women can handle."

AIR FORCE ACADEMY
Jill M. Gassler, 18, of New Brighton, Conn., said she is taking things in stride.

"The first and second week I was in shock," she said.

"The third week and fourth week things smoothed out."

SHE LIKES the basic training (similar to that in the regular army, navy and air force "because of the physical grind).

"They thought they were killing us but they weren't and out here (she was interviewed at Jack's Mountain physical training area), you really get it."

"You can feel it. You can feel the sweat running down your fatigues and you know you're getting a good work out."

LINDA M. SWEENEY, 18, of Tucson, Ariz., echoed the feelings of female cadets at other service academies when she said:

"The major change was basically, just like everyone else, I had to leave my family and all my friends. Other than that, nothing really serious."

Joyce P. Cain, 18, of Ocean Springs, Miss., said she liked the obstacle course and confidence course.

"LIKE SLIDING down a rope," she said. "I never imagined that I would be able to do it."

She did it letting herself down a 40 foot-rope.

Sometimes she is homesick. The men said they are on occasion, too.

"Everytime I get a letter I get choked up," she said. "Everything is different here. There's nobody really here to lean on. Back home you had friends that you knew really well and your family."

"WHEN YOU cry you have to cry on your own shoulder."

Six times a day she decides to quit and six times a day she decides for some reason to stay.

U.S. COAST GUARD ACADEMY

Captain Sidney B. Vaughn, commandant of cadets, would not permit cadets to be interviewed. The summer program is difficult — doubly difficult for a woman because "she's in a man's world," he said.

"She is greatly outnumbered, homesick and physically tired," he said.

"By and large they're doing quite well," he said. "Just as the males, I really can't see a great deal of significant difference in performance between the girls and the boys."

"THERE ARE SOME differences as far as their physical education performance is concerned and we fully expected that."

"What we are expecting is an equal amount of effort. It may take a girl as much effort to run 100 yards in 12 seconds as a man in 10 seconds."

"There are little things like the M-1 rifle we use. Some of the girls have that problem with it. It weighs 14 pounds."

(AT WEST POINT the M-16 and M-14 rifles are used, weighing about five pounds less. The M-1 is used also at the Merchant Marine Academy. Almost an antique, the M-1 mainly is for drills. At Annapolis weapons training is with pistols — 22s and 45s.)

Ten women now are on a week's training cruise on the Eagle, the majestic sailing ship that was in Operation Sail July 4.

"I would say without any question that the men in the new class have accepted the women. They go to class together, they eat together, they have intramural sports. A baseball team may have a girl as a left fielder and the other eight players are men."

THE COMMANDANT said he didn't see publicity serving much useful purpose with regard to the women.

Besides, he said — "The less that is written about the girls, the less I hear from the men."

ANNAPOLIS

THE NAVAL ACADEMY

Academy officials broke with custom the other day and allowed young women midshipmen to be interviewed, following a two-hour sailing training session.

To show that all plebes are treated alike, an academy boat took reporters and photographers onto the Severn River to witness some of the sailing instruction.

Usually, access to all plebes is denied until training ends in late August. But West Point twice during plebe summer has had "media day" and is planning a third late in August — and this may be an instance of Navy following Army.

PLEBE CAROL A. Thompson, 18, of Spartanburg, S.C., said she applied to the academy because she wanted to be a naval officer.

She said women officers should serve in combat. Congress, in lifting sexual barriers at the service academies last fall, did not remove restrictions against women serving in combat.

"IF THEY DON'T let us serve in combat, this is all for nothing," she said.

"We're going to be on ships and I think they're going to have to let us serve in combat."

Rear Admiral Kinnaird R. McKee, the superintendent, spoke about combat and women, saying:

"That's a matter for Congress and the American people to decide."

"IT'S LIKE asking a three-week-old child if he wants to become president of the United States."

Plebe Tina-Marie D'Ercole, of Hamilton, Ohio, said she wanted to go into the Navy since the seventh grade. Plebe summer has been a major adjustment, or awakening.

"All the yelling and screaming is something you have to get used to," she said.

At West Point, where the yelling and screaming originated — almost nose to nose — the training has been put into a quieter range, officials say.

AT THE AIR Force Academy, officials said the yelling and screaming is not the way people are dealt with.

No one said anything about yelling and screaming during the Merchant Marine Academy or the Coast Guard one in New London, Conn.

At Annapolis Midshipmen especially enjoy sailing in 22 and 44 foot boats.

Some alcoholics learn to drink moderately: report

NEW YORK (UPI) — A small percentage of recovered alcoholics can learn to drink moderately, two new reports concluded Sunday.

The studies, published by the Rutgers University Center of Alcohol Studies, tend to reinforce a similar finding in June from the Rand Corp.

The Rand report and its suggestion that not all recovered alcoholics need give up drinking forever drew warnings from those in the front lines of the battle against alcoholism. The two new ones are expected to add to the controversy.

Abstinence has been the most successful route for the recovered alcoholic and it is the bedrock of the Alcoholics Anonymous program.

The reports in the Journal of Studies on Alcohol come from the Addiction Research Foundation, Ontario, Canada, and researchers at the Center of Behavioral Medicine of the University of Pennsylvania department of psychiatry.

The Ontario study was designed to test what would happen when patients at an alcoholism clinic were told to work toward a goal of reduced drinking, rather than total abstinence.

NINETY-SIX patients were given a four-week course of treatment consisting of lectures and group discussions, and advised to work toward controlled drinking. They were followed up a year later to see how they fared.

Eighteen or about 20 per cent were drinking moderately. That meant they were drinking only occasionally in small quantities, were not getting drunk, were not drinking during working hours and were not creating problems at home with their drinking.

Even though the goal was moderate drinking, nine of the patients had given up drinking entirely. The remaining 69 patients still were drinking heavily.

The researchers believe the findings support the belief that a small percentage of alcoholics can return to social drinking.

But they said that a one-year follow-up wasn't as good as a test of several years.

The Ontario researchers, Robert E. Popham and Wolfgang Schmidt, said the successful patients, though they had been drinking addictively, had on the average been consuming considerably less than the others prior to treatment.

A belief that beer drinkers would do better than distilled liquor drinkers in returning to moderate drinking was not proved by the research.

In their post-treatment drinking, half of the moderate drinkers were using beer, the other half distilled spirits.

THE RESEARCH team from the University of Pennsylvania said scientific evidence contradicts the belief that alcoholism is an irreversible physical disease and, therefore, no recovered alcoholic ever may drink again without risking relapse.

The belief about the inevitable, one-way course of alcoholism, say the investigators, is based on "unwarranted faith in an unproven hypothesis."

Response to the new reports is expected to be similar to that created by the Rand report.

Dr. Ernest Noble, director of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, in a statement endorsing abstinence as the practice for recovered alcoholics, said:

"Until further definite scientific evidence exists to the contrary I feel that abstinence must continue as the appropriate goal in the treatment of alcoholism. It would be extremely unwise for a recovered alcoholic to even try to experiment with controlled drinking."

Officials at the National Council on Alcoholism said the Rand report would cause some recovered alcoholics to drink and "many people will die."

Schaumburg Mattress Factory

HOW TO SHOP FOR A MATTRESS

1. Pay attention to all the radio and TV ads by the big name manufacturers. Each one will tell you what famous medical group or orthopedic society or surgical committee designed that particular mattress.

2. Go to a retail store and find the famous Bleepy "This-A-Pedic" or the Blurpo "Bumpy Rest" and poke it with your fingers. Use all four fingers because you can't really tell how it feels by poking with just two fingers.

3. By all means do not lie down on it because you might be a little embarrassed to have people see you lying on a mattress in a retail store. Besides, that lying on a mattress is a bigger surprise the first time you way you can get a bigger surprise the first time you try to sleep on it. Anyway, if it's one of those Pedic kinds, the salesman would probably just as soon you wouldn't find out how hard it really is.

4. Don't act shocked when the salesman tells you the King size set is only $500.00. After all, the super deluxe model is only $50.00 or $100.00 more.

5. Before you make a final decision, go to the Schaumburg Mattress Factory. We have a small showroom in the front of the factory, and we want our customers to lie down on our comfortable mattresses. And if you just happen to doze off for awhile, we won't even bother you — until closing time of course.

Picture-perfect catalogs — a form of art that sells

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Every American home has one stashed away in a closet somewhere

It's a homeowner's guide — a colorful scrapbook of clothing, household goods and mechanical equipment. Major department stores call them their merchandise mail order books. The average shopper calls them catalogs.

BUT PEOPLE LIKE Richard H. Nugent consider them an art form and much more than a convenient purchasing device. It's "art" because without that eye-catching appeal, the products don't sell.

Nugent, 61, has a vested interest in catalogs. He is president and founder of Nugent-Wenkus, Inc., an advertising art and photography firm based in Des Plaines that produces seasonal catalogs for stores like Sears, Roebuck & Co., Aldens and Jewel Food Stores.

His job, even 30 years after he started the company, still compares with that of a movie or theater director who strives for the perfect scene, who is the master of illusion.

The company's headquarters, 1100 Northwest Hwy., is a former greenhouse that contains a busy collage of prop storage rooms, film studios and dark rooms, artists, seamstresses, carpenters and photographers.

THE EFFORTS of about 100 employees there contribute to making things such as bath towels, folded and stacked in catalog pictures, seem fluffy as possible.

They are experts at making merchandise look picture perfect. Curtains are pressed and uniformly pinned in place, bedspreads and throw rugs are padded for softness, and even clothes on dolls are ironed and their curly locks brushed.

Producing catalog pictures is far different today than it was in the 1930s when Nugent, then a novice illustrator, used his talents to sketch pictures of sale products for catalogs.

"Those were the days of early photography. We drew everything for advertising purposes so there was always a need for illustrators. It was very intricate work," Nugent said. "There was a lot of fooling you could do with a pen that you can't do with a camera."

But, the pace of business today demands the use of a camera, he said, and the production of catalogs has become very routine.

FIRST, CLIENTS and salesmen design pages for the catalogs or special Sunday newspaper advertising supplements.

A color scheme is worked out for the display, the necessary props are ordered, the scene is set up and photographed. It is sent to the printers once the client has approved the picture.

The preparation of one ad, from start to finish, can take several weeks, and there are thousands of ads that fill an average fall-winter, spring-summer catalog, he said.

If the scene requires models, they are flown in from New York or hired from a Chicago agency. If the ad requires food, it is prepared on the premises.

BACK DROPS are painted and repainted, wall-papered and tiled to meet the specifications of the advertising layout, Nugent said.

About 30 different room scenes, used in advertising dining room sets or living room furniture, can be photographed simultaneously in the firm's gymnasium size gallery. The scenes are constructed and torn down within several days' time.

Sale merchandise and props used in the making of the ads are stacked high to the ceiling on storage shelves. Furniture, fake fireplaces, doorways, rolls of carpeting, racks of drapery and bathtubs are stored in a warehouse after use, he said.

"The toughest part about this job is getting rid of the stuff afterwards," Nugent said.

BUT, THE EASIEST part of the job has to be when clients are willing to pay for Nugent and his film crew to take pictures of their outdoor sports and camping equipment, clothing and other items in a Florida or West Coast setting.

The company was located in what was once the Paradise Ballroom on Chicago's South Side before moving out to Des Plaines nine years ago at about the same time Joseph C. Wenkus joined up as executive vice president to handle the company's personnel and financial matters, Nugent said.

"My heart is still in the production end of the business," he said. "The people in this business still interest me the most. We have an awful lot of fun at this."

For lower electric bills

Man offers to 'adjust' meters

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Mount Prospect merchants have been approached by a man offering to 'fix' their electric meters in what Commonwealth Edison Co. officials believe is a major meter tampering scheme in the area.

Utility company officials also have said electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of that scheme. The company, however, would not release the names of the restaurants.

Two downtown merchants, when asked if they wanted their meters fixed, refused the offer.

"IT WOULD HAVE been stupid," said Edward Pung, owner of the Town Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St. Pung said a man calling himself John P. Jones was doing some electrical work in the snack shop prior to its opening in March. "He asked me if I wanted to save enough to buy a Cadillac," Pung said. "He said it would cost me $30 a month."

Pung, a Wheeling resident, refused to have his meter tampered with and said he threw the man out of his restaurant.

Donald P. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., (tampering) before he came in here," said he was confronted in January by a man also named "John." Moss said the man told him "he had the tags necessary to set back both water and electric meters."

Moss, a resident of Rolling Meadows, said he was told his monthly bills would be reduced from $250 to $75 if he went along with the scheme. Moss also refused, saying his bills have only been between $60 and $70 monthly since his shop opened in February.

"I NEVER HEARD of it (meter tampering) before he came in here," Moss said. "I was impressed he could do it, but I told him I don't need his services. He told me we both could make money on it."

Commonwealth Edison officials have discovered up to 40 per cent declines in electric bills of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants. The utility said it has billed those businesses on a prorated basis to compensate for the monetary loss. It is impossible to accuse someone of meter tampering unless he is caught in the act, company officials said.

Walker's delay hurt school bill

Governor Daniel Walker has done education and Illinois citizens a disservice with his amendatory veto revising the state school aid formula.

Walker chose to keep educators in limbo for several more months by refusing to take direct straightforward action on House Bill 3518. State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, the chief sponsor of the bill, and area school officials seemed pleased with Walker's action in approving the legislation, but the fact he has delayed enactment has caused a problem.

Walker approved most of the important school aid formula revisions, but he confused matters by tying implementation of the legislation to passage of his controversial accelerated tax collection plan. The governor contends the state does not have enough money to put the revisions into effect unless the $95 million that would be gained from the tax collection speed-up is approved.

Walker's veto effectively postpones enactment of the legislation until July 1, 1977, unless the General Assembly approves an accelerated tax collection plan. The General Assembly's next session is Nov. 17.

At the center of the dilemma is the Chicago School District which without the trade-off agreement will lose $24 million of the $55 million penalty for closing 16 days early this spring. The money also would fund other school aid changes this year. For down-state and suburban districts, the legislation means those districts will not lose an anticipated $22 million in state aid along with other measures favorable to districts with declining enrollments.

We question Walker's action because it simply postpones a financial crisis rather than dealing with it. It seems that if the state does not have the money to afford the revision now, Walker should have vetoed the chances outright.

Placing Illinois education in the legislative cracker barrel seems to fall against all progressive attempts to improve the legislative process in this state.

Linking implementation of the school aid changes to legislation which is yet to be passed and which has been defeated twice in the spring session of the Illinois General Assembly — is a politicization of Illinois education.

To compound the problem, there are expected to be challenges to the governor's action tying school aid to another issue. If the challenges result in law suits, court action could delay implementation even further.

Walker could have avoided the prospects of more controversy with direct action.

Praising flood rescuers

Fate spared four Northwest suburban families from the deadly tragedy of the Big Thompson River Canyon flood last week.

Jack and Virginia Parkin, George and Shirlee Schorie, Joan Koebnick and the Melvin Lacey family listened to grim reports of death and devastation in the wake of flash floods in the Colorado camp area near Loveland knowing their relatives were there.

But happily, their fears could be dispelled. Their relatives had escaped unharmed.

Colorado officials and volunteers have worked untiringly during rescue operations. At least four local families are indebted to their efforts.

Big Ben is getting old

For Londoners, the silence will be deafening.

The bell has tolled for their historic, monumental Keeper of the Hour. More than a century of pounding, punctual performance has muted Big Ben.

The 117-year-old giant timepiece atop the Parliament building bellowed a painful last chime at 3:46 p.m. Thursday, then coughed woefully into silence, suffering what maintenance officials say is "metal fatigue." Though the stately clock resumed ticking later that day, officials say the hourly chimes will remain muffled for several more weeks, the quarter-hour chimes possibly as long as a year.

Alas, Big Ben, as time marches on, your "fatigue" is another sign of the times.

Pro/Con

Who do our banks really serve?

Rep. Henry Reuss

How good are American banks?

God and the government have been very kind to banks. Banks get privileges that other people in our society don't get. They have the power to create money. They have a chartering authority which sees that they don't have more competition than is deemed desirable. They get federal deposits without having to pay interest on them. They get free, government-financed check clearing services and guarantees for housing and small businesses. When banks make large loans and get in trouble, as in the case of Lockheed or in the case of Franklin National, there is always somebody in the government who is big enough to bail them out and make it even nicer, they get a ceiling on interest they pay the saver or the depositor, but, of course, there is no ceiling on what they charge the borrower. Looking at what the Bible said: "From those to whom much is given, much shall be required." If you look at what is required (from banks) . . . if you walk with me a few blocks to the central city of Washington, you'd find what you see in so many cities — poorer neighborhoods inadequately served by financial institutions, including banks. If the bankers are going to lose their shirts in housing, how about losing their shirts in housing for modest income people rather than in housing for $100,000 condominium owners in Florida? It isn't a question of the building trades. They make out in either event. It's a question of social values. You find that one third of the new office space in Manhattan is unrented because the banks went ahead and made loans without really bothering to inquire whether there were tenants to inhabit these new buildings . . . Some of these high-flying schemes (should) be down played in favor of what the nation really needs, which is attention to the financial needs of our people where they are.

How much risk should U.S. banks take in less developed countries?

International lending is a good thing. However, there are some areas in which I think American banks have been carried away with themselves. Recently, for example, when our secretary of state was condemning the use of torture by the Chilean government and our representative in the International Monetary Fund was voting against credits to Chile because of its precarious financial condition, a dozen or more of the most distinguished American banks proceeded to make a very large loan, I think it was $120 billion, to Chile. It seems to me that where our own government has raised a question about the nature of a foreign power, it ought to be something in which the American banking system would say, well, we'll sit this one out.

What do you think of a Washington bank's decision to charge small savers a fee?

The thing that bothers me about it is that like so many things that financial institutions do — some of them, I admit, with the consent of Congress — discriminate against the small saver. This bank says to a saver with an account of $500 or less, "Sorry, we're going to charge you a service charge because you're so modest in your savings." The only reason it's small is that's all he's got. When a small saver goes to the U.S. Treasury and wants to buy a Treasury bill with that wonderful 9 or 8 per cent interest rate, Uncle Sam says, "Sorry, unless you've got $10,000, we won't sell you a bill." So all the small saver can do is go to a bank or savings and loan where, by law, he can only get 5 to 6 per cent.

Walter B. Wriston

How good are American banks?

The basic reason people put their money in the bank instead of in a shoe box is because they believe that they will get it back whenever they want it and it will be held safe for them. At the end of the worst recession in 40 years not a single depositor of a single bank of the 14,000 in the United States lost a penny. Now, that would be the answer to the question about how good the banks are. The second question is: are the banks supplying credit which is needed to individuals and corporations? and the answer to that will vary depending on your political persuasions. The most powerful lobby in the world is the real estate lobby. They persuaded the Congress to put a ceiling on the amount of interest we can pay you on your savings account. The reason they have a price control on what you get is so that someone else can get a fixed rate mortgage on your bank and I agree 100 per cent with Mr. Reuss that there ought to be more competition in banking. But there is an act of Congress which prohibits branching and competition. As far as home real estate loans are concerned — and we made them, there isn't any question about that — there is no more goodness in financing a single family home in Racine than there is in building a condominium in Florida. What we're really talking about is that someone perceives that one form (of housing) in our society is more meritorious than another. And that gets into political allocation of credit as opposed to the marketplace.

(Another) side of the coin is that consumers are badly served by the banking business. Delivery of financial service to the individual is poor. The most important thing you've got is your lunch hour and you spend half of it standing in line at a bank. That is very poor service. The only way that you can improve service is to substitute electronic machines for standing in line. Whether your records are electronic or on paper has absolutely nothing to do with privacy. The Internal Revenue Service now thinks it should have a hunting license to come and find your account. We have taken the position that your bank records are like a doctor's records. I think everyone should take heed that the government is, in fact, getting more and more powerful to investigate your personal life.

How much risk should U.S. banks take in less developed countries?

All of those loans to less developed countries are not funded out of the American capital market. They're funded out of the Euro-dollar market. The fact is that no bank has lost any money at all, not a penny, on any loan to any government since the end of World War II. That is a reasonably good record. We do not anticipate any losses in loans to the developing countries. Certainly, some of them will be rescheduled in the same way we've rescheduled many personal loans to individuals who are laid off. Or that we've rescheduled for corporations that get in trouble. But I would not anticipate that the risks involved are any greater than in any other form of lending.

What do you think of a Washington bank's decision to charge small savers a fee?

If wages are going up, and they should, you have to either get the money back through efficiencies in productivity — which is the route we're (Citibank) going — or you have to charge the consumer. If this bank makes a charge and no other bank makes such a charge, everybody is going to walk across the street and put their money in the other bank. Like selling automobiles, or kikkis, if you price yourself out of the market, you don't have any after awhile.

The lighter side

Do you have any rutabagas or okra in your family tree?

by DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Science is rapidly gaining on, and in some cases overrunning, science fiction.

It was reported the other day that some of the boys down at the Brookhaven National Laboratory had succeeded in combining human cells with the cells of a hybrid tobacco plant.

And in Hungary, scientists have fused human cells with those of carrots.

These experiments still are a long way from the dreaded Celery Man that stalks the pages of science fiction. But who knows what might happen in time?

The direction I'd like to see this research take would be the use of plant cells to infuse human beings with some of the more admirable characteristics of certain vegetables.

There are people — I'm one of them — who are terribly wilt-prone. Under given circumstances that vary from individual to individual we wilt so fast you wouldn't believe it.

While I can't begin to identify all the things that leave me wilted, one of them is congressional oratory. Let me walk into the Senate or House gallery when there are stentorian forensics on the floor and I wilt on the spot.

Wiltiness is a serious handicap for someone in my line of work. Perhaps science can help by crossing human cells with the cells of wilt-resistant tomatoes.

And certainly some of our more excitable citizens would benefit from an infusion of the celebrated coolness of cucumbers. Could be the greatest thing since Valium.

They will have to be careful which cells they match up, however. Otherwise, the experiments could become counterproductive.

In my victory garden this summer I am growing a strain of okra known as "Clemson spineless." Although I wouldn't object to having a few okra cells in my body, if spineless okra were used it could result in a loss of fortitude that would offset the extra backbone gained from wilt-resistant tomatoes.

Neither, for that matter, would anyone look with favor on any cellular fusing that might make us susceptible to aster yellows, a disease that attacks tomatoes, potatoes, carrots, celery and onions, among other plants.

The potential swine flu epidemic is enough concern without having to worry about coming down with the aster yellows.

According to published accounts, the Brookhaven experiments appear to support the hypothesis that human cells "contain communities of organisms descended from independent forms of life related to bacteria."

This suggests, if I am reading it right, that man and vegetable might have a common ancestry. Con-founding Darwin, it may turn out that man descended not from apes but from turnips. Which would be okay by me.

I wouldn't mind distant kinship with rutabagas. In fact, I'd be relieved to learn there's no broccoli in my family tree.

Want to sell your own home?

Agent can increase your profit

Dear Mr. Rosefsky: What do you think about using a real estate agent to sell one's house, as opposed to doing it yourself? If we can save a few thousand dollars, I can't see any reason why we shouldn't give it a try, at least for a couple of weeks. If we don't succeed, we can always hire a broker to do it for us. Does our thinking make sense?

A—it would be tempting to say you've got nothing to lose so go ahead and try it. But I'm not sure you don't have some things to lose by trying to sell your house on your own. Things such as time, money and peace of mind.

While there are never any assurances that a real estate agent can get you exactly what you want, when you want it, they are much more capable of delivering than you yourself might be. A good agent should be able to leave you better off, even after his commissions, than you would have been on your own.

By attempting to sell it yourself your potential audience of buyers are only those who drive by your house, or those who see your ad in the newspaper (for which you'll have to pay). The real estate agent has access to all of the potential buyers going through his firm. And if he participates in your community's multiple listing service, he has access to virtually every would-be buyer now in the market for your type of house.

by Robert S. Rosefsky

His familiarity with the local market conditions can enable him to determine what a reasonable price would be for your house. Acting on your own, you might seek too high a price and scare buyers away. Or you might not ask enough, and suffer accordingly if you sell it for less than you could have received.

The agent can perform many other functions on your behalf, such as screening out curiosity seekers from serious buyers. Selling on your own, you have to be ready for anyone that comes marching up to your front door, day or night, serious or otherwise. You have to set your schedule to satisfy anyone who wants to take a tour of the place. You have to answer all the phone calls. Are you ready for all of that?

Many serious buyers are unfamiliar with making the financing arrangements to buy a house. This can delay a sale considerably, if not kill it altogether. An experienced agent will know the ropes on obtaining financing, and he can put together a complete package to suit all of the parties. Can you do that yourself? If so, how much is it worth to take the time to do it?

A good agent is a trained negotiator who has been through scores, if not hundreds, of similar transactions. You may have been through only one or two. He, then, is in a much better position to haggle, to compromise, to know when to hold firm and when to ease up. He can create a deal where none might have existed, or he can salvage one that may have seemed doomed.

Interview a number of agents, and find one whose chemistry matches yours, and whose track record gives you confidence. It won't take long, and you've got nothing to lose.

West Point taming 'beast barracks'

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — This summer West Point is taming "beast barracks" — the eight week indoctrination for new cadets.

The training got its name from its reputation for subjecting newcomers to severe humiliation and stress — pushing some to the pass-out point during physical training.

I spent a day at "beast barracks" with the class of 1980 — the first to include women, 105 in a group of 1,485. A dozen women by midpoint in the training (started July 7) have dropped out. And so have 66 men.

SENIOR CADETS in charge say there's less screaming and yelling, the barracks themselves are quieter, and no one passes out during physical training.

A few limbs have been broken during field exercises, as in the past. But authorities say this is due to tripping in boots not laced properly.

Cadet Kathleen Silva of North Reading, Mass., was in the field her broken ankle in a cast.

New cadets still sit at attention during meals in the mess hall. But no more are eyes downcast, as once required. At mealtime the academy also has done away with the silly questions from upper classmen. Quizzing was meant to interfere with meals, adding stress.

SOME OLDER cadets complain that physical training has been eased. It looked plenty tough — producing the kind of sweat you get in tennis singles on a humid day.

During the four years at West Point — a $90,000 education — plebe summer is supposed to be the worst.

"Our class was the transition class," said Cadet Steve Lefmine, 21, from Wantagh, N.Y., a senior and on the detail training plebes.

"It started before we knew women were to be admitted."

THE NEW CADETS prefer the field exercises to being at the academy proper — where parade practice and marching go on, plus the questioning by senior cadets during all but mealtime.

In the field they don't need to run errands for the upperclassmen — or deliver their papers.

"This is basic individual training combined with cadet basic training," said Lt. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, superintendent.

"One of the stresses we build in is little sleep and being tired — so they can learn how they can perform when tired."

PLEBE ROBERT Algermissen, 19, from Albuquerque, N.M., said basic training was harder. He went to the enlisted man's West Point prep school after spending some time in the Army.

"I also got used to women at the prep school," he said. "For some of the other new cadets that might be hard to take. The first time somebody in fatigues went by trailing perfume I did a double take. Two things that still don't seem to go together."

"You're always pressed for time," said Cadet Robert Davis of San Diego, Calif., 17. "It's constant stress. That's why I like it here."

Plebe Colleen Brennan, 21, of Pottsville, Pa., talked about beast barracks as we finished a C-rations. She and her company had just come off the rifle range where they practiced with the M16 machine gun — shooting 500 to 550 rounds a minute.

"I really enjoyed the machine gun," she said. "It's a powerful weapon. On the range, all wear helmets and ear plugs."

THE C-RATIONS, which cost civilians $1.40, consist of olive drab cans of peaches, crackers and candy, fortified peanut butter from the Cinderella Food Division of Stevens Industries in Dawson, Ga., and five ounces of beef in spiced sauce from Oscar Mayer and Co. in Madison, Wis.

Cadets use government-issued P38s to open the cans. These are metal cutters the size of a razor blade and with no moving parts.

Beast Barracks begin at 5:30 with reveille and are followed 15 minutes later with physical training for 45 minutes — usually starting with a run of a mile or more to warm up for exercises.

I watched grass exercises — training for guerrilla warfare — requiring movement in all body parts. Cadets chant, grunt, make animal sounds.

SIT-UPS ARE mild compared to most of the exercises which include rolling to the left and making guttural sounds, rolling to the right and doing same.

On the run back to the barracks, several girls fell out. Some of these are getting remedial exercises.

Taps is at 10 and in between the day includes practice parades, weapons firing, drilling, classes, eye and dental examinations and fittings for uniforms.

"If you're perfect, you don't need to worry during beast barracks," said Plebe Kirk Schaumann of Prior Lake, Minn.

"I like the field the best. You're allowed to be yourself."

HE MISSES freedom, sleep, Saturday night outings, junk food and pizza. He does not like sitting at attention during dinner.

New cadet Michael Kosnitsky, of North Miami Beach, Fla., said he wants his Mom to know he'll take her nagging over West Point's any day.

And a buddy Kirk Conroe, O'Fallon, Ill., wants his Mom to know — "I'll be back for Christmas, if not sooner."

Novice Bill Weeks, of Springfield, Va., isn't sure how he likes West Point yet.

"It goes up and down."

DURING FIREMAN'S carry and other two-man field exercises, one cadet carries another in relay fashion.

Males carry males and/or female cadets. The girls carry other girls or males.

The competitions also include relays with cadets carrying rifles and the gun's magazine in a race.

The boys clench their teeth around the magazine. Several girl cadets were observed putting the magazines in their bras — making it easier for them to run faster.

THE FOURTH company of eight started with 15 women and has 15 still. It also seemed to have plenty of spirit. The boys, for example, during the fireman's carry yelled at one girl carrying a fellow cadet — "Come on, Kate."

They were treating her like one of the boys. New cadet Kate Goodland from Ames, Iowa, moved faster. The guys patted her on the back at the finish line.

Nancy Guchwa from Staten Island, N.Y., said the girls "get a lot of razz" from the guys.

"They blame the girls in the group if the group doesn't do well in competition," she said. "But we can't help it if we don't weigh 160 pounds. We give it all we have."

Ginseng: touted as cure for whatever ails you

research done on ginseng in the United States. The Food and Drug Administration is currently looking into promotional claims for ginseng as a drug, and considers it unsafe as a food additive simply because no data has been submitted to prove otherwise. As might be expected, the American Medical Association dismisses ginseng as having no therapeutic value, although an AMA spokesman conceded they really know very little about it.

But ginseng certainly has another kind of value: The U.S. is currently importing $2.1 million worth of the stuff from South Korea, up from $67,000 five years ago. These figures reflect the export price of ginseng, which is around $2.30 an ounce.

However, ginseng is currently selling in area health food stores at $6 to $8 for 50 eight- or ten-grain capsules — which amounts to more than $200 per ounce.

You can also buy ginseng extract ($9.95 for a two-ounce bottle at Life House, Woodfield); ginseng tea (anywhere from 40 cents a packet at Sunrise Farms on Rand Road to $11.50 for an ounce in a Loop store); red ginseng beverage, $16 for 30 packets totaling three ounces; and ginseng cookies and chewing gum.

Or, how about ginseng rejuvenating cream, $9.95 for four ounces; ginseng soap, $1.50 a bar; ginseng aftershave by Jovan, $6 for four ounces; ginseng cologne for men by English Leather, $5 for five ounces.

According to Tom Koch of Barry's Natural Food Store in Mount Prospect, ginseng has "caught on" in the northwest suburbs. Koch says it moves pretty well, and that nearly every week there are salesmen from the major vitamin companies coming in to sell him ginseng. Proprietors of other area health food stores also reported ginseng products selling well.

Most of the ginseng on the market in the United States comes from South Korea, where it is grown and exported under the direction of the Office of Monopoly. The Korean government is currently subsidizing and otherwise hyping ginseng production in anticipation of achieving the $100-million-a-year export level by 1980.

The Korean government claims that ginseng is cultivated "on soil using particular methods and climatic conditions native to Korea." Thus, they conclude, "the cultivation of Korean ginseng in other countries is considered almost impossible."

But, while the legend of Korean ginseng was catching the fancy of American health food devotees, a little-known American ginseng industry has been growing the root in Wisconsin and exporting it to the Orient.

U.S. Department of Commerce figures show that this country currently sells almost 250,000 pounds of ginseng a year to Singapore, Hong Kong, Taiwan and other countries for a take of $12.6 million — six times the amount imported.

(A Commerce Department official, when asked for the export figures, first insisted, "We only import it, we don't export it.")

According to Tom Karlen, a Wisconsin exporter, some 180 to 190 thousand pounds of ginseng are produced annually in that state by 75 growers, mostly located in Marathon County northwest of Rhinelander. Most of it is exported, though some Karlen ginseng products are sold in local health food stores. Both the export and retail prices of American ginseng are comparable to Korean ginseng.

The root, which requires hilly land for drainage, acid soil, plenty of shade and three to five years to mature, has been commercially grown in Wisconsin since the early 1900s, according to Karlen. But, he said, the local folks are not themselves smitten by the elixir. "They grow it because they know how. Until a few years ago some didn't even know what it was for — they just knew the Chinese wanted it." Now, due in part to GIs who brought tales of ginseng back from Korea, so do Americans want it. But they had best keep in mind that throughout history ginseng has been the tonic of royalty and ruling families, prized more highly than gold and silver. And it looks like ginseng is going to stay in the class of gold and silver, price-wise.

Adjustment harder for widows

Widowers are better adjusted to their state than widows, according to a recent study of widowed persons conducted by the research and evaluation department of Lutheran General Hospital.

The study was made to identify problems of the widowed so doctors, nurses and others could relate with more sensitivity and understanding to the family of the deceased or to terminally ill patients and their families.

It was conducted by Raymond G. Carey, Ph.D., director of research and evaluation services for the hospital and his staff. The 119 persons interviewed included 78 widows and 41 widowers, aged 28 to 70, whose spouses died at Lutheran General 13 to 16 months prior to the interview.

"Our single, most important finding was that widowers were significantly better adjusted than widows," said Carey.

While both experience such problems as loneliness and indecision about the future, the extent of these problems was greater for women, said Carey.

He attributed the superior adjustment of widowers to several factors:

- Many women tend to build their identities around their husbands, and when the husband dies, the wife's life style is radically changed.

- Statistics show women tend to live longer than men and that men usually marry women younger than themselves, so it is easier for a man to remarry.

- The difficulties widows have, such as making decisions and handling financial matters alone, concern for personal safety and worry about dependent children, far outweigh the difficulties widowers experience in

Dr. Raymond G. Carey

Raymond G. Carey, Ph. D., research and evaluation consultant for Lutheran General Hospital, helped establish the hospital's research and evaluation department in 1974 and has served as its director since then.

He holds a Ph.D. in social psychology from Loyola University, a master's degree in pastoral counseling from Loyola and a master's in theology from St. Mary of the Lake Seminary.

maintaining their homes and handling children alone.

Carey also found that widows who had at least two weeks warning about the approaching death of their husbands adjusted much better than those whose husbands died suddenly. A warning was not a significant factor for widowers.

"The fact that 20 per cent of the widowers in this study had remarried as compared to none of the widows suggests that women do not work through their grief as quickly as men and women may have deeper emotional attachments toward their husbands than men do toward their wives," Carey speculated.

It also seemed more important for women to talk through their anxieties and grief, he said.

LONELINESS was the biggest problem for both widows and widowers, the study showed. The evening meal and the later evening were notably difficult times.

Indecision about the future, a lack of personal goals and the need to be needed by someone were other problems for many interviewed. The widowed, particularly those without children, had difficulty finding someone with whom to share their feelings.

For widowers, learning how to run the house without their wives and handling the emotional needs of their children were frequent problems. They had difficulty getting younger children off to school and helping them with homework where wives previously had met these needs.

Making decisions without their husbands caused anxiety for widows. Some who feared for personal safety had nightmares about someone breaking into their homes. Those unaccustomed to handling financial matters found it hard even to pay bills and make purchases.

THE WIDOWED over age 57, the median age of those interviewed, adjusted better than those under 57, and again, Carey noted, the age factor was more important for widows.

"Age is related in a positive way to adjustment," he said. "Younger widowed persons may be more inclined to feel cheated because their spouse's life was cut short and because they have fewer persons their own age with whom to identify."

In the Lutheran General study college educated persons were significantly better adjusted than those with a high school education or less. Education, which provides a person with more interests, more opportunities for meaningful employment and more financial security, was especially important to those women not working when their husbands died or having dependent children to support.

Carey found that widowed persons who lived alone were better adjusted than those who lived with dependent children, and these, in turn, were better adjusted than those living with independent children.

Other findings:

- Those who considered their whole marriage happy adjusted better than those who had experienced periods of unhappiness in their marriages.

- Those with a spouse who had a serious problem such as alcoholism or a spouse who committed suicide were very well adjusted, apparently feeling relief when their problem ended.

"Generally," Carey said, "the traits of a mature and unselfish person are the same traits that enable a person to accept and adjust to widowhood. Those who have been successful in achieving a happy marriage are those who are most likely to handle successfully the problems of being widowed. However, the adjustment will be easier for those who have had some warning."

Teen girls' sexual behavior changing around the world

by JOHN A. CALLCOTT

Abortions and pregnancies are on the increase among teen girls around the world, but WHO says the girls are not to blame.

Doctors and sociologists contacted by the World Health Organization (WHO), headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland, say the fault lies with government and the society at large.

Girls today are losing their virginity at younger and younger ages and health experts are concerned at a serious increase in abortions and unwanted pregnancies among teenagers.

A report sent to WHO from Dr. Elsa Ryde-Blomquist of Stockholm's Karolinska Hospital said that between 50 and 75 per cent of girls the world over experience sex in their teens. In some countries it's as high as 90 per cent, WHO says.

"The probability of coital relations before marriage has increased as has the likelihood of adolescents experiencing their first coital relations during their early teens," a WHO report said.

THE EXPERTS say society has not recognized or accepted the fact that sexual behavior has changed and that youths today mature much faster. Also, improved nutrition and health care have lowered the average age of menarche, or the first menstrual period, to just 12 years in developed countries. In developing nations it is still higher, but is dropping fast.

A number of countries have reported substantial increases in recent years in rates of birth out of wedlock and in abortion, with adolescents constituting a significant proportion of the cases.

But official facilities for providing teenagers with factual information about sex and contraception are badly lacking, or even illegal, in many countries, according to Dr. Karin E. Edstrom, of WHO's Maternal and Child Health Unit and formerly an obstetrician at Karolinska hospital.

"The attitude of governments must change because more and more young people are going to have sex anyway," she said.

"SEX EDUCATION would be like teaching young people how to drive and wouldn't make society more promiscuous," she added. "Values won't be threatened by factual information. Youth must be taught that sexuality involves responsibilities. This would reduce unwanted pregnancies and abortions."

In Finland, where 0.6 per cent of the female population had abortions, 32.1 per cent of the abortion patients were found to have

Sewing with woven fabrics a challenge for fall

Here it is, the first part of August and not a minute too soon to think about fall and our fall wardrobes. Let's put away summer things that haven't been completed and get ready for those first cool days that always come before we know it.

I find that each new season is like a shot in the arm; there is always something new both in styles and colors. I especially love fall colors, they're so warm and lovely and the textures of fabrics are so luscious. No matter where you live, you can vary your wardrobe enough that there is certainly something for everyone.

We must begin by thinking "woven" fabrics; they are here in great abundance and are being shown in all the designer collections. This doesn't mean that knits are out by any means — just that they are being supplemented by wovens in many areas.

Working with wovens might be a whole new ball game in sewing for some of you. It's not too early to find out about refresher sewing classes in your area; it's money well spent.

Sewing your own clothes will save you money. How much you save depends on the type of garments you make and the quality of fabric you purchase. I would safely say you can save a minimum of 50 per cent on anything you make and in many cases you will save much more. Besides, you have the added bonus of choosing your very own colors, fabrics and styles that are the most flattering to you.

SPEAKING OF choosing fabrics, many of you have written me about fabrics or notions that I mention in the column that you simply can't find in your area: I am going to try a new Reader Service to help you out. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with any request you have, to Eunice Farmer in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60008, and I shall try to give you the information you need. Write early; you must allow several weeks for an answer.

We have a new word in our fashion vocabulary for fall. It's the tabard. It's a loose coat to be worn over other garments, usually embroidered and was worn by the knights of the Middle Ages. It's actually another way of "layered dressing" and is adapted today in many forms.

It can resemble a sleek, straight tunic to be worn over sweaters or shirts and the sides are often slit to the waist. The one pictured can be worn over pants or a dress (the pattern, Vogue 5553 also includes a smahsing, slim shirt dress). The length is up to you.

The tabard is usually made of contrasting fabric. Here again, use a fabric that is right for your climate. They can be made of corduroy, mohair, satin, Ultra-suede and flannel, as well as countless other fabrics — the choice is ours. This is one item that I strongly recommend to give your fall wardrobe that 1976 look.

For Eunice Farmer's booklet, "All About Sleeves," address a long envelope to yourself, put 13 cents postage on it and enclose it with 25 cents in an envelope addressed to Eunice Farmer, in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I am beginning to see lots of corduroy for fall. Some of it is almost as smooth as velvet; others have heavy ribs. I know there are some in-just remember to cut it all the same way.

If you are working with princess lines, or flared skirts the two pieces of pattern cannot be placed to fit into each other, and you will always need two lengths of fabric.

CORDUROY COMES in many "wales," from a no-wale corduroy which resembles velveteen, to six or eight wales per inch used for sportswear. There are many qualities of corduroy available. A good quality corduroy is much softer and less like a board. It also shapes much better.

Corduroy is usually 100 per cent cotton and is always washable; it often becomes softer and lovelier with each washing. Be sure to pre-shrink anything you use when working with this washable fabric — including zippers.

Seams should be overcast to prevent the nap from rubbing off onto other clothes. It will be a great fashion item this fall and will be used for jackets, skirts, pants, vests, coats lined with poplin and many other choices. The colors are luscious. I think most of you will find some corduroy in your fall wardrobes.

High temperature can damage body

Please inform me and many other parents if this statement is correct: "The main reason for controlling a fever is to make a child more comfortable. Fevers do not cause brain damage and rarely cause convulsions."

I know people who believe this is the reason for their child's brain damage. If this is true, a person taking care of a child with fever should not need to worry needlessly. Otherwise all parents should be informed of the real truth.

The statement you refer to is an over-simplification. Excessive heat will damage body tissues. The point is what degree of heat you are talking about. Body cells begin to show damage at temperatures of 106 degrees F., or above. (Note: the body temperature may not be quite the same temperature as you get from a mouth thermometer.) Individuals suffering from a heat stroke may have widespread body tissue damage.

The brain cells are particularly sensitive to heat and cannot be replaced if damaged. Many parts of the body regenerate if damaged, but not the brain cells. At body temperatures of 110 degrees F. death will occur if the temperature persists.

For these reasons I consider a fever of 106 degrees F. as dangerous, not from the disease but from the fever itself. Any elevation above this point should be treated vigorously to lower the body temperature.

The critical level of body temperature is about 106 degrees F. The body seems to have some special mechanism that usually stops the rise in temperature with illnesses at this level. A fever is sometimes helpful and the body can control its temperature in normal environmental temperature. A tiny thermostat in the brain regulates the body temperature. By turning on heat generating mechanisms the body temperature will rise; by turning on the cooling mechanisms the body temperature will fall. When you have a fever, the body thermostat has simply been reset at a higher level. Aspirin and similar medicines cause the body to reset the thermostat at a lower level, reducing the fever.

THE BODY TEMPERATURE would rise to levels that would cause death if it were not for the cooling mechanisms. The food breakdown to give you energy releases lots of heat energy. Exercise increases the metabolism of food or stored fat deposits and also generates lots of heat. The heat is lost through your skin.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-6, Body Temperature and Fever, to give you more complete information. Others who want more information can send a long-stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Just address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, Tex. 78209.

In general, in illnesses, you need not worry about brain damage if the body temperature is 105 degrees F. or less. At 106 degrees F. efforts should certainly be made to reduce the body temperature to protect against the adverse effects of the body heat.

To protect against heat stroke as might occur in a laborer or an athlete if the body temperature is 104 degrees F. and accompanied by any signs of impending heat buildup, steps should be taken at once to cool the body.

Another reason to read those labels carefully

It's no secret that I've had a couple of cancer operations ('64 and '70). Everything's fine except for having to be careful about my "lymphedema arms." But who would have thought that the big problems would come in summer and that insect bites are an ever-present danger? It's made me expert on repellent sprays. Turns out a number of them are bad for synthetic fabrics. You have to learn to read instructions with minute care. Fortunately, all the labels are adequately descriptive. Reason the fabrics come into the act is because those who work in woods or brush have often dusted sulphur powder on clothes (as in cuffs of trousers) to repel chiggers and may now use repellents. Chiggers have never bothered me much, nor have mosquitoes. But there are many other biters among the insects and the surprise is that the very chemicals (with fancy trade names) that this column has recommended for years to ward off chiggers are ideal for shooting off the others, too. The best ones contain chemicals like deet, dimethyl phthalate, dimethyl carbate or ethyl hexanediol. If these names throw you, clip this out and refer to it as you examine the labels.

Dear Dorothy: Made my first meringue-topped pie. It was a huge success, except that the waxed paper kind of stuck to the meringue and ruined some lovely "peaks." How do you avoid this?—Pat Meagher Place a few toothpicks at equidistant points. Keeps the waxed paper clear of your meringue.

Dear Dorothy: This is for the plaster-patchers among the do-it-yourselfers. When anyone wants the stuff to dry fast, just add a drop of vinegar to the mixture.—Jeffrey Means

Weddings

Joan Sandberg — Michael Bellito

Teachers at Hersey High School, Joan Adine Sandberg and Michael J. Bellito, were married July 10 in Calvary Community Church, Williams Bay, Wis., at 3:30 p.m. A buffet reception immediately followed in the church hall for 25 guests.

The bride is the daughter of the Lawrence A. Sandbergs of Lake Geneva, the groom's parents are the Henry J. Bellitos of Arlington Heights.

After a honeymoon in Southern California and Colorado the newlyweds have returned to Arlington Heights to make their home.

JOAN IS A graduate of Taylor University and Michael of Cornell College in Iowa. He also has a master's from the University of Illinois.

The Rev. Eugene Ongna of Arlington Heights Evangelical Free Church officiated at the ceremony, in which Joan's sister, Mrs. Wayne Perkins, Walworth, Wis., was matron of honor and Robert F. Smith, Wichita Falls, Tex., best man. Bob also sang solos during the service.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Steve Oldham and Kathy Pryor, both of Arlington Heights, escorted by groomsmen Dan Johnson, Westmont, and Thomas Bellito, the groom's brother.

MIKE KOZANECKI and Dennis McSherry, both of Arlington Heights, seated the wedding guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Bellito

The bride entered the sanctuary in a white jersey gown with lace accents and an elbow-length veil held by a Swedish crown. She carried a white Bible with orchids and stephanotis attached.

Her attendants wore blue jersey with red and white accents on the bodice and carried nosegays in white, red and blue.

Greenerfields fall classes

started sex before the age of 15

"It has to be accepted that a large proportion of teenagers are sexually active and in need of sexual education or contraceptive advice," Dr. Ryde-Blomquist told WHO in her report.

"This need is urgent," she said. "Earlier, socio-economically active teenagers were to be found most in the lower socio-economic classes, but nowadays they tend to come just as often from the opposite end of the social scale."

DR. EDSTROEM said perhaps only 25 per cent of sexually-active adolescents practice contraception.

"Sexual relations are overromanticized in the media, especially the movies," she said. "There is certainly no information about what could happen."

Traditionally it was the family, and often the grandparents, that provided sex information to the younger members, she said. But the family is changing.

At a meeting of 16 experts from 12 countries convened by WHO it was noted that young people increasingly leave the family home at earlier ages.

"The teenage girl is under considerable peer-group pressure to conform to new standards of behavior in sexual relations at a time when her knowledge of reproductive behavior and the implications of sexual intercourse may be limited," the experts said.

LACK OF LEGISLATIVE backing or approval of parents for schools to provide education on contraception was criticized by the experts. Where family planning services do exist, they said, these are mainly designed for older, married women with "custom, tradition and even legislation tending to prohibit and limit their utilization by adolescents."

Schools may be likelier to help and teachers more ready to discuss sex with pupils, if the term "sex education" is changed to a more acceptable "family life education," the experts concluded. They recommended separate services for adolescents.

Ask Andy

Blushing normal, not embarrassing

Andy sends a Student Globe to Tammy Biddix, 12, of Fletcher, N.C., for her question:

WHY DO PEOPLE BLUSH?

Just about all of us have been embarrassed at one time or another. Perhaps we do or say something awkward which leads people to laugh or joke or even criticize us. Sometimes someone will unintentionally cause us embarrassment. Whatever the cause, some of us blush. Suddenly we feel hot about the face. And our hands, pressed against our cheeks and forehead, confirm our suspicion that the warmth we feel is really there.

Blushing is perfectly normal — in fact, it is a good sign that our hormones are working properly. We know that various hormones are always present in our body, but strong emotions trigger chemical and physical changes which sometimes include more hormone production than usual. In blushing, tiny blood vessels in the skin, called capillaries, swell with blood. Certain hormones have stimulated the vasodilator nerves of the capillaries, raising them to expand. And when this happens, it is especially noticeable in the face because the capillaries are so close to the surface of the skin.

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Karen Lange, 10, of Tacoma, Wash., for her question:

HOW DID THE DIFFERENT LANGUAGES COME ABOUT?

If asked to estimate how many languages there are in the world, what would you guess? A hundred, or maybe even 500? Well, if your guess came close to 3,000 you are right. Some of the 3,000 or so languages are spoken by only a few hundred or a few thousand people. Other languages, English and Chinese, for example, are spoken by hundreds of millions of people.

Exactly when, how and where language first began is a mystery that may never be solved. Although man has had the capability of speech for thousands, or perhaps hundreds of thousands, of years, it was not until he could set down his thoughts in writing that they became recorded for future generations to see. And writing is a relatively new idea, going back some 5,000 years in the history of man.

A number of theories attempt to explain how languages evolved. One prime theory is that languages were spread during war time. When soldiers fought in foreign lands they carried with them their languages which were picked up by others. When England was invaded by Danes, their language changed. The Norman Conquest brought further changes in the language. And although Latin — the first war-transported language — is no longer used as a conversational language, about half of our English words are derived from it.

English, as a language, has borrowed and adopted words from almost every other language in the world. The dictionary tells us that many of our words had their beginnings in France, Italy, Spain, Japan, Australia, Russia and many other countries. And new words are constantly invented to keep up with changing times.

...for THE CLOTHES BIN

"Flair... a real help"

That's how Jill Thornton, owner of The Clothes Bin in Mount Prospect, describes the effectiveness of advertising in The Herald's "Flair" section. Here, in part, is her letter:

Congratulations on The Herald's new "Flair" section. Your new concept in feature journalism is a real help to us in getting across our fresh concept in merchandising fine fashions at truly great savings at The Clothes Bin. "Flair" is obviously addressed to the kind of perceptive, fashion-conscious reader we want to reach, and last week's edition brought many women to the Clothes Bin whom we had not met before.

We are really pleased that The Herald's new "Flair" section will let more and more women know about the outfits we have to offer.

Sincerely,

Jill Thornton

South takes a long shot

Oswald: "The 'H' in our code word ARCH, which stands for 'How can I make my contract,' causes declarers to make some mighty fancy plays."

Jim: "Here's one South ruffs the second heart and seems that he needs a lot of luck in the spade suit if he wants to bring his contract home. He draws trumps and is pleased to see that they broke 2-2. Then he lays down his ace of spades in the hope of dropping an honor. This doesn't happen, but a resourceful South considers that 'H' in ARCH."

Oswald: "There is one extra chance, but he has to risk a two-trick instead of one-trick set. He must lead a diamond and finesse dummy's jack."

Jim: "This works and he is in business. He ruffs another heart, enters Oswald: "The defense is helpless. If West rises with the king of spades, he drops his partner's queen. If West ducks, his partner takes his queen, but has to lead a heart to give South a ruff and discard."

FDA decision due soon on fate of new arthritis drug

A decision is expected in the "near future" on whether a new arthritis drug will be removed from the market because of questions about its safety, according to Food and Drug Administration officials.

The drug, naprosyn, marketed by Syntex Laboratories in San Francisco, was approved by the FDA and put on the market in March on the basis of a safety and effectiveness study conducted by Industrial Bio-Test Laboratories of Northbrook, one of the nation's largest independent testing laboratories. Bio-Test is a subsidiary of the Nalco Chemical Co.

An FDA investigator testified in a Senate hearing last month that he had uncovered "very serious" flaws in the test. Dr. M. Adriah Gross told Sen. Edward Kennedy's health subcommittee that laboratory records indicated several animals used in the drug tests had "died several times," and that dead animals had been allowed to decompose, making them "practically useless" for study.

FDA Comr. Dr. Alexander Schmidt said the practices used in the testing "were bound to result in substantial under-reporting of tumors" in the animals and that the study was so defective it neither proved nor disproved the safety of naprosyn.

PHYSICIANS WROTE 98,000 prescriptions for Naprosyn in May, two months after it had been approved. It is used in the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis and is believed less likely to cause bleeding ulcers than some other medications that might be substituted.

Gross told The Herald the FDA has no great concern at this time that naprosyn is dangerous because there is "no independent knowledge that it is unsafe." But he added that the unacceptability of the Bio-Test study "may be sufficient to remove naprosyn from the market." He said "things are being done — letters are being circulated" now with regard to that possible action, but "we are not ready to make an announcement yet."

Schmidt had indicated at the time of the disclosure July 19 that he would take some action on naprosyn "within two weeks." Schmidt was reported to be on vacation last week.

In the meantime, Gross said he is still working on his report of the on-site investigation of Bio-Test. He said his report will document exactly how the irregularities occurred.

"A LOT WILL DEPEND on this report," Gross told The Herald. "The question is whether there is more than mere incompetence, whether there is criminal negligence. There may have to be more investigation to answer that and to determine whether criminal charges will be brought."

He emphasized that his report on Bio-Test procedures is "not linked to" the disposition of naprosyn — that will now proceed independently — and that "there were already indications that things were bad at IBT before this."

Raymond J. Roman, assistant to the president of Bio-Test, told The Washington Post at the time of the disclosures that the company "has a long history" of cooperation with the FDA, and he pledged to work with the agency to safeguard public health.

"I believe we haven't seen anything from the FDA at this time about the drug," Roman told The Herald. "It's premature to comment at this time."

Bio-Test does testing on pesticides, food additives and other compounds for the FDA, the National Cancer Institute, and the Environmental Protection Agency, in addition to its drug testing under contract to drug manufacturers.

The FDA began a year ago uncovering faulty animal testing by other laboratories in connection with drugs and food additives. The others were G. D. Searle & Co. of Skokie; Hazelton Laboratories of Vienna, Va., and Biometric Testing, Inc., of Whippany, N.J. The FDA is still considering what action to take in connection with those companies.

Schmidt has said the agency is taking a close look at the relationships between testing laboratories and drug manufacturers.

We're half-persons: mixed-race kids

by LEON DANIEL

HONG KONG (UPI) — If the wages of the wars America fought in Asia were death, the payoff also included life, in the form of uncounted thousands of mixed-race children born into a world that did not want them.

Sired by American GIs and born out of wedlock to Asian women, these fatherless youngsters are the tragic legacies of war.

It is impossible to count them, just as it is impossible to measure the sadness in their eyes.

The first time I saw one — in a Vietnamese village a decade ago — it was his eyes that held me.

He was a toddler, perhaps 3 years old. He stood apart from the other children and kept his eyes on us, the foreigners. It may have been the first time he had seen hair and eyes like his own.

His hair was brown and straight, his eyes blue. But he also was unmistakably Vietnamese, with high cheekbones achieving prominence on a face somehow too old for a boy still a baby.

As the helicopter lifted us away from the village, I grinned at the solemn youngster and gave him the thumbs-up sign. He continued to stare deep into my eyes but did not respond.

In the years that followed, I sometimes saw other such children, on teeming Tokyo streets, in the slums of Bangkok and Manila and in Korean villages.

Some, born during World War II and the Korean war, are now adults. Others are babies who play in the gutters of the honky-tonk towns on the outskirts of the dwindling American military bases left in Asia.

Their stories vary. But there can be no doubt they have been dealt with harshly as reminders of wars many Americans would like to forget but the Asians cannot.

In many parts of Asia, the half-black children suffer the most acute discrimination because, as a Japanese social worker expressed it, they are "more visible than the half-whites."

The situation is perhaps worst in South Korea, a nation with a highly structured, homogeneous society where mixed-race children refer to themselves as "half-persons."

Lee Jung-Soo, 21, whose Korean mother told him he was sired by a black sergeant in the U.S. Air Force, said he hated school because he was taunted by his classmates for his dark skin and Negro features.

"Every day was like hell," he told UPI Correspondent Paul Shin in Seoul. "By the time I was in the fifth grade I was an outcast. I was ridiculed everywhere. I didn't want to meet anyone."

At the age of 10, Lee ran away from home and, with the help of an American GI, settled near a U.S. Army unit. At 12, he was placed in an orphanage with about 120 other mixed-race children.

"I was happy in the orphanage," Lee said. "Nobody teased me there."

The taunting, however, began again in high school. When a teacher complimented Lee on his ability to read English, other children sarcastically attributed it to his "American blood."

"After that I made mistakes intentionally, so I wouldn't be teased," he said.

"Another problem was my desire for a girl friend. I never tried to make friends with girls because I thought none of them would like me."

After high school, Lee quit several low-paying jobs because he could not bear the taunts of fellow workers. Currently he is receiving vocational training and hopes some day to operate a heavy machinery.

"After many years of hardship, I have learned to control myself to a certain degree," he said. "But I am still unstable." As for the future, "I will do my best."

According to a survey conducted by Dr. Carroll B. Hodges, director of the American Kor-Asian Foundation, which tries to help mixed-race youngsters, there are about 2,550 such children in South Korea, almost 30 per cent of them fathered by blacks.

"Culturally, these children are Korean," Hodges told me in an interview in Seoul. "Few of them speak English."

Hodges' program emphasizes vocational training, but he claims no ultimate solutions for the problems of the children and doubts they would have an easier life in the United States.

The greatest number of mixed-race children probably are in Vietnam, scene of the longest U.S. military intervention in a foreign war.

A few days before Vietnam fell to the Communists in April, 1975, a Saigon prostitute told me she feared the victors would "kill my baby because he is white."

In the three and one-half weeks I remained in Saigon after the war's end, I found no evidence mixed-race children had been harmed by the Communists.

UPI Correspondent Alan Dawson, who remained in Communist Saigon five months, said many Vietnamese mothers hid their half-American children until it became clear there was not "any kind of bloodbath, at least in Saigon."

"UPI correspondents visiting orphanages when Viet Cong or North Vietnamese Army officers were there found them fascinated by the flax-haired kids, and singling them out for attention — candy, small toys, whatever, and a lot of affection," Dawson said.

"It appeared they had not seen tow-haired kids before, and the only eyewitness reports we ever got indicated they were treating those kids especially well."

Dawson remembers a Vietnamese woman trying to give away her handsome blond-haired son, about 6 or 7 years old, because she could not support him.

The woman brought the boy into the lobby of a Saigon hotel where U.S. Cong cadre were staying.

"She wept, the child wept and many present wept as she sobbed that she was unable to feed her son, let alone herself, because she had no money and no source of income," Dawson said.

"A uniformed soldier offered to take the child, put him in a school and bring him up 'as a nephew of Uncle Ho Chi Minh,'" said Dawson, who said he believes the soldier took the boy with him when the cadre moved out the next day.

Perhaps no Asian nation accepts mixed-race children more easily than the Philippines, where many Filipinos are proud of their Spanish blood. But for Tom Rosales, 15, a skinny youngster with red hair and a shy smile, life is not what it could be.

Tom goes to high school in Manila. He gets some financial help from the Pearl Buck Foundation, another organization which aids the children its famous founder, author Pearl Buck, dubbed "Amerasians."

Tom goes to school because he wants to be a meteorologist some day; but school, for children who are different, can be a painful experience.

"It's worse for the half-Negro kids," Tom told UPI correspondent Kate Webb. "They discriminate against them. There are seven of us at the school. The other kids make jokes about us sometimes."

HILDALE COUNTRY Club professional Ron Gee takes aim on the testing 13th hole, a par 3 with trouble on all sides for Paddock Publications tourney golfers next Sunday. A slice brings a splash on the right; a hook brings woods and rough.

Challenging

Paddock tourney site demands accuracy

by PAUL LOGAN

If you hook the ball one time and slice the next, you'll learn to fear Hilda Country Club's hundreds of "barber poles."

That's a kindly term for the red and white stakes that dot the landscape of this championship 18-hole course in Hoffman Estates.

When Robert Trent Jones designed this par 71, 6159-yard (from the regular white tees) layout, he must have wanted to penalize the scatter-gun hitter. Every hole but one — the fourth — has these out of bounds stakes.

So, accuracy will be at a premium for those four-man golf teams who will be competing for the championship at the 27th annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament Sunday.

Located about a mile west of the Higgins-Golf intersection on Higgins Road, this six-year-old course is really coming into its own. Jones designed the course among the Hilda Village townhouses and apartments, causing the need for some of the "O.B." stakes.

Along with these potential penalty stroke problems are other hazards, such as several ponds, creeks, woods and rolling hills.

Ron Gee, the host professional, likes to point out the differences between the front and back nine.

"That's the easy side," says Gee of the front nine. Those nine holes play over 100 yards less than the back and one stroke less — par 35.

The first hole should get Paddock golfers off to a pretty good start. At 347 yards, this is one of the shorter par 4's on the front side. But you'll need an opening par to have the confidence for No. 2.

At 542 yards, it's your only par 5 on the front nine. Protecting the approach to the green is a pond which occupies the right side of the fairway over the final 100 yards. With out of bounds on the left, there's only a narrow landing area. If you go for the green and hit on the opposite side of the pin, you can easily have a putt of over 100 feet.

Since every shot rolls right, you have to play your teeshot dangerously close to the dense stand of trees bordering the left out of bounds. In that way you can get maximum roll on this 366-yard par 4. An accurate drive and the rest is easy, hopefully.

The fourth — a par 3 — and the fifth — a par 4 — are good par possibilities. Especially the latter — a 327-yard dogleg.

The sixth — a par 4 — runs parallel to the third. That means more sidehill lies along its 366 yards. Aim for the big tree in the middle of the fairway with your teeshot.

Called "the toughest par 4" by Gee, it lives up to its reputation. The card lists it at 385 yards, but it's all uphill. It plays like it's over 400.

Golfers have to be careful with their club selections on the par 3 eighth, especially if the wind's at their backs. Over-clubbing will cost out of bounds strokes.

The ninth is a fairly open par 4. If you can avoid the sandtraps which guard the green on this 392-yarder, you might record a par . . . and it could be your last for quite a few holes.

Pars are most difficult to come by between the 10th through the 13th holes.

"If you've shot a good score on the front side and can get past the first four holes (on the back), you can come in with a pretty good score," said Gee. But that's a pretty big "if."

The 10th is one of several layup holes. A cluster of trees is located on the right side of the fairway, approximately 190 yards from the tee. A little farther out — just about the landing spot for a good drive — is a pond.

A long iron or fairway wood will avoid the water, but there's still a testing approach shot to the green.

Gee takes great pride in discussing the 607-yard 11th. "It's the toughest par 5 around here," he claims, ranking it with the difficult seventh at Butler National. "The average score is close to 10!"

The first problem is your teeshot. From an elevated tee you must split the fairway. Large trees on both sides wait to spoil your plans.

Out of bounds stakes mark the left and right sides from tee to green, adding to the pressure.

A solid drive and second shot might give you the confidence to shoot for the green. The creek awaits those who land short of the green.

The green is wide but not deep, demanding your approach shot to be very high and extremely accurate.

"A lot of people are at par or bogey before they reach the green," said Gee. "I played with one guy who had a (score of) 26 with one putt!"

The 12th is termed "the second toughest par 4 on the course" by Gee. It's easy to see why. About 200 yards from the tee on this dogleg right hole there's a creek, and you can't see it.

Short hitters will have to lay up with their drives, leaving a testing second shot to this 364-yard hole. Traps around the green will catch plenty of shots Sunday.

If you've survived these first three, only the 13th is left. But it could be the most difficult for the high handicap golfer because there's plenty of water.

Anything hit to the right on this "toughest par 3 at Hilda" will make a splash. Shots hooked to the left will find woods and rough.

Even if you avoid all of this as well as the bunkers around the green, it will take a precision shot to find the narrow green. Double bogeys will probably be the average score on the unlucky 13th.

"It's all downhill from there on," said Gee with a twinkle in his eyes.

But each of the remaining five holes has its challenges, such as:

- the hidden pond on the short par 5 (500 yards) 14th which will swallow seconds shots hit to the left.

- the many sand traps on the little par 4 (300) 15th as well as the ever present "O.B." stakes,

- the water and trees on the par 4 (332) 16th — a 90 degree dogleg into a green surrounded by water,

- the par 3 (165) 17th with water on the left and behind the green and "O.B." on the right and

- the par 4 (332) 18th where the pressure of a fine finish will magnify even the slightest difficulties.

The back nine is 3126 yards long and plays to a par 36. Few tourney contestants will worry about par. For those who do, the course record is 66.

Heights tops county; state play is next

by ART MUGALIAN

Down to his last able-bodied pitcher, Arlington Heights coach Lloyd Meyer reached into his bullpen for the fourth time Sunday evening and pulled out what proved to be a ticket to the American Legion state tourney in Springfield, which starts Thursday.

Meyer called on southpaw Bob Huber to put out the flames in the ninth inning and preserve Arlington Heights' 11-10 victory over a surprising Northbrook team. Huber retired the last two Northbrook batters with the tying run in scoring position to send the Arlington fans home happy.

The victory was the fourth in a row without a loss for Meyer's crew in the Cook County tournament, a double-elimination affair which began when Arlington Heights beat Chicago Ridge, 14-3, and Northbrook fell to Cicero, 1-0.

While Arlington Heights knocked off Morton Grove and Cicero, the host Northbrook club beat Chicago Ridge and upset Cicero in a Sunday rematch to earn a shot at Arlington. Had Northbrook won Sunday night, the two teams would have faced off for the title in a Monday finale.

But there will be no tomorrow for Northbrook, thanks to Huber and Arlington teammates Tony Spinelle, Tom Barnard, Kevin McBride and all the rest.

Arlington had fought back from a 6-2 deficit early in the game to take an 11-10 lead into the ninth, but Northbrook put runners on first and third with just one out against McBride, who was Arlington's third reliever of the game.

McBride, had pitched a complete-game shutout to beat Cicero, 4-0, on Saturday, but he accepted Meyer's call and put down Northbrook in the eighth. But in the ninth, he walked pinch hitters Brian Edwards and Steve Sandstrom.

So in came Huber, who himself had worked six innings on Friday night.

"It was a gamble as it was," said Meyer, who admitted he was really strapped for hurlers by the time the day was over. "Huber was supposed to have pitched on Monday if we had to play."

But Huber retired Keith Schneider on a grounder to Brett Frase at third, and the Arlington pitcher ended it all when Jim Lalona tapped a bouncer to first baseman Barnard, who flipped to Huber covering for the final out.

For a long while it looked as though Northbrook was going to force the tourney to Monday. They hammered Arlington starter Dennis Drolet for five runs in the second inning, taking advantage of Drolet's wildness. Then a long homer to center in the sixth by Rick Voigt increased Northbrook's lead to 6-2.

Arlington had scored a pair of runs in the first on two walks, a double to right by Barnard, and an error in right field on a sacrifice fly by John Vukovich.

Meyer's men capitalized on a couple of key infield errors by Northbrook in the sixth to take an 8-6 lead. Hits by Frase and Gary Kempton opened the rally and an infield single by Guy Tenuta with the bases loaded kept it going. Then, two straight bobbles with the bags loaded on grounders by Barnard and Vukovich let in three more runs.

Northbrook sent eight men to the plate in the bottom of the sixth against reliever Todd Walker, scoring four times to take a 10-8 edge. The key hit in the inning was a two-run line single by Voigt.

Arlington waited until the eighth to push across the go-ahead runs, and again it was a vital Northbrook error that paved the way. With one out, Vukovich, Don Stebbins, and Frase drew walks from Kurt Redig, who had relieved Brian Carly in the sixth.

Northbrook sent first baseman Sam Poulos to the mound, and Poulos was greeted by pinch hitter Spinelle, who lined the first pitch to center for an RBI single. Then John Mertins stepped to the plate to bat for eventual winning pitcher Doug Harth.

Mertins hit a hard grounder toward first base and reserve first sacker Steve Ostrander — playing in place of Poulos — fielded the ball and fired wildly to the plate, trying for a force. The errant heave allowed two runs to score, giving Arlington an 11-10 lead.

White Sox win opener, 5-2; come up 'short' in nitecap

by BOB GALLAS

The White Sox, who've had a tough time winning this season in long pants, nevertheless proved Sunday they could win in short pants, too.

The unveiling of Bill Veeck's latest innovation to Abner Doubleday's brainchild finally came to pass Sunday before a turnout of only 15,977 paying customers.

And with knees bared for the world to see, the Sox won the first game of a doubleheader with Kansas City, 5-2.

Returning to standard attire for the second contest, the fifth place Sox got back to reality, losing 7-1.

"I'd look a lot better if these were a little shorter," quipped second baseman Jack Brohamer as he modeled his new outfit.

Meanwhile, comments from the Kansas City dugout ranged from slurs against Jerry Hairston's kneecaps to "Hey, sweetie, wanna kiss?"

The biggest worry about the shorts, a first for major league baseball, was that the exposed knee would make sliding hazardous at best.

But the Sox swiped five bases in the opening game without the slightest bump, scratch or bruise to prove those fears unfounded.

"If you're sliding right, you're not on your knees anyway," said Hairston, who stole the first base of the afternoon for the Sox.

A specially designed pad that folded into the long white uniform stocking just below the knee, also helped keep the knee off the ground while sliding.

While the players liked the new style uniform pants, which they described as "comfortable," the fans were, for the most part, unimpressed.

"It was alright as far as being something different, but as a baseball fan, I'm not sure if I'd like to see it all the time," said 18-year-old Jerome

Johnson of Chicago.

Sox manager Paul Richards said he ordered the players into long uniform pants for the second game because of the cool weather.

"I think the players liked them (shorts)," Richards said between games. "But the weather should be real warm and humid when you use them."

Warm weather is one thing the Southsiders haven't had much of this season, so Sox owner Veeck decided to unveil the shorts before it got much later in the summer.

In honor of the occasion, Veeck, club vice-president Roland Hemond, numerous other club officials and announcer Harry Caray, also sported short pants for the afternoon.

As for the games, there were few bright spots outside of Terry Forster's first game win and John "Blue Moon" (Continued on page 2)

DISPLAYING fine form — and his kneecaps — is White Sox' pitcher Terry Forster against Kansas City Sunday. The Sox made their major league debut in short pants in the opening game and won, 5-2, with Forster pitching six innings to get the victory. In the second game of the doubleheader, the Sox went back to wearing long pants and lost, 7-1.

Foolish Pleasure brings crowd, cash to Arlington

Turf Editor

It was strong medicine, but just what the doctor had ordered.

Foolish Pleasure, one of turfdom's all-time champions, breezed to the winner's circle of the $125,000 Golden Invitational Saturday, curing Arlington Park's affliction of dwindling attendance and money bet on the races.

Joseph Joyce, Jr., the chief surgeon who prescribed the Foolish Pleasure antidote one week ago, called the operation a complete success.

A meet record 28,314 fans attended the affair that was co-highlighted by Effervescing's impressive five-length triumph in the $75,000-added Round Table Handicap.

Equally important was the racegoer's generous contribution of a $3-million handle, the richest intake by an Illinois track in racing history.

The record-breaking symptoms were easily diagnosed.

The parking lot overflowed into a seldom-used annex along the south end of the track.

The roar from the spectators at mid-stretch of every race closely resembled the landing of a 747 Jumbo Jet at the corner of Euclid and Wilke.

The racing strip was fast and so were the mutual clerks, dispensing tickets as quickly as a parking meter maul below quota.

Hansel and Gretel could have found their way home blindfolded by following the thick carpet of littered ducats.

The scene was reminiscent of days gone by — when the country's largest and most powerful stables were annually anchored at Arlington.

But Saturday, Foolish Pleasure was a transplant, arriving from New York late Thursday with the magic tonic — crowd recognition and appreciation.

Ten minutes prior to the running of the Golden Invitational and before the former Kentucky Derby winner had even made his appearance on the track, $30,000 had been wagered on his nose to win the 1-1/8 mile event against a field of five other challengers.

It may have been even more had assistant trainer John Nazareth not named Earlie Fires to ride Foolish Pleasure instead of Eddie Maple who was grounded in New York by fog.

Maple was originally scheduled to pilot both Effervescing and Foolish Pleasure, a parlay that cost him a five-figure payday because of the eastern weather.

"Earlie rode for us before quite a bit," Nazareth explained of the jockey switch. "It's a shame Eddie couldn't have been here."

The change in riding assignments failed to appreciably affect the betting public. The $50,000 bet to win on Foolish Pleasure five minutes before post cast him as the eventual 3-10 favorite.

By the time all seven starters were tucked into the gate, Foolish Pleasure had won the confidence of the fans to the tune of $91,359 bet on him to win, $36,844 to place and $20,740 to show or finish third.

Accelerating from his fifth post position, the facially-undistinguished millionaire allowed Famed Comedian the luxury of setting the early pace.

But once the pack had fought their way up the backstretch, Fires urged Foolish Pleasure to close a one-length gap to the lead.

"I told Earlie to get his position and to make him move," Nazareth explained. "I told him to keep the horse's mind on the race because he has a tendency to loaf."

Foolish Pleasure caught and passed Famed Comedian at the turn entering the stretch and disposed of rallying Proponent under the left-handed whip of Fires.

Festive Mood finished third, Double Edge Sword fourth and Sr. Diplomat fifth ahead of the pooped Famed Comedian.

The final margin was 3 1/2 lengths in a snappy 1:47-3/5, less than one second off the track record of 1:47-4/5 by Damascus in 1967, but Nazareth admitted there were still moments when he was concerned.

"When you stop worrying, you're in bad shape," the righthand man of Leroy Jolly said. "The only thing you can be sure of is paying taxes."

Foolish Pleasure backers pocketed $2.60 to win, $2.60 to place and $2.20 to show. Proponent returned $5.40 to place and $3.20 to show and Festive Mood added $3.40 to show.

Foolish Pleasure's injection, both bodily and financially, into Arlington Park brought instant relief.

But the recovery period is still critical. If the side effects serve to boost Arlington's attendance and handle over the final 48 days of the meeting, the Foolish Pleasure prescription will be considered 1976's miracle drug.

CLOUD NINE. Foolish Pleasure, with all four feet off the ground, and jockey Earlie Fires hunched in the irons, draws clear by 3 1/2 lengths to win the $125,000 Golden Invitational at Arlington Park Saturday. Getting unenviable hindsight are (from left) Festive Mood, Proponent, Double Edge Sword, Famed Comedian and Sr. Diplomat.

Bengals 3rd in baseball invite

The Bengals of Arlington Heights took home third-place trophies after consolation play Sunday in the Libertyville Invitational Baseball Tournament.

In Sunday afternoon action the Bengals defeated Winthrop Harbor, 11-4. Steve Todd hit two home runs while Dave Mayerck and Mike Duffy each belted one. Tom Totzke had three hits, including a double, to help Duffy earn the victory.

Mundelein dropped the locals into the consolation bracket Friday night with a 12-3 victory. Although the pitching suffered, there were several Arlington hitting stars with Totzke going 3-for-4 with a home run, Mayerck rapping a homer, Jeff Chastka and Duffy doubles and Vic DeGiorno two singles.

Arlington entry wins LaCrosse tourney

The Arlington Heights 12-year-old All-Stars baseball team, sponsored by North Point State Bank and Hallmark Realtors, ripped off six straight victories and marched to the championship over 84 teams from around the Midwest in a tourney in LaCrosse, Wis.

Mike Aiello, Tom Reichel, Brad Rosley and Tom Sanders were chosen to the all-tournament team for Arlington Heights.

Rosley hit his second homer of the game in the sixth with the score tied 4-9 to give Arlington Heights a 10-9 win in the final game. The team had overcome a 3-0 deficit in the game against Bloomington, Minn. before Rosley and Reichel hit roundtrippers.

Reichel had hammered a three-run homer in the tourney opener as Arlington Heights whipped Pigeon Falls, Wis., 11-0. Rosley also delivered a grand slam in that game as Sanders pitched a four-hit shutout.

Rosley struck out 10 Neillville, Wis. batters in game two and delivered a two-run single for a 3-2 victory. Aiello also drove in a run with a base hit.

Scott Seeley followed Reichel around to score on Sanders' three-run homer in the first inning of game three as Arlington wiped out a 2-0 LaCrosse lead. Aiello hit a grand slam in the fourth and Mike Spellman picked up the 9-3 win.

Aiello fanned nine as Arlington edged Onalaska, Wis., 6-3 in the fourth game. Tom Brown and Lance Pearson drove in big runs for Arlington Heights.

Sanders hit a two-run homer and picked up his second mound victory as Arlington routed Rochester, Minn., 14-3 in the semifinal. Mark Ferlin contributed two doubles and Spellman and Tim Jauch added triples.

March 7, 1972, as amended, and is now operating under an Act in Relation to Free Public Libraries for cities, Villages and Incorporated Towns and Townships, and to Local Acts and Parts of Acts Therein Named," approved July 12, 1887, and

WHEREAS, the Board of Library Directors of the Village of Arlington Heights and the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Arlington Heights have heretofore determined that it is necessary and in the best interests of the Village that a new library building be constructed on a site made available to the Board of Library Directors by the Village of Arlington Heights, and that necessary equipment and furnishings for said addition and existing library building be purchased and installed therein;

WHEREAS, the Board of Library Directors of the Village of Arlington Heights and the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Arlington Heights have heretofore determined that it is necessary and in the best interests of the Village that library materials consisting of books, films, recordings, and similar materials be purchased in connection with the expansion of the existing library building;

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Arlington Heights have heretofore approved the said plan for the construction of said addition to the existing library building and the purchase of necessary equipment and furnishings therefor, and the estimated cost thereof, as said plan and estimate of cost were heretofore submitted to this President and Board of Trustees by said Board of Library Directors;

WHEREAS, the Board of Library Directors has heretofore estimated the cost of constructing said addition to the existing library building and of purchasing necessary equipment and furnishings therefor to be Two Million Two Hundred Twenty Five Thousand and No/100 ($2,225,000.00) and has also heretofore estimated the cost of purchasing such library materials to be Seven Hundred Twenty Thousand Dollars ($720,000.00) and the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Arlington Heights have heretofore determined that funds are not available for the purpose of paying the cost of constructing said addition and purchasing such equipment and furnishings therefor, and acquiring such library materials and has found that it will be necessary to borrow money and in evidence thereof the bonds of said Village for the purpose of paying the aforesaid costs;

WHEREAS, the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Arlington Heights did, on February 2, 1976, call an election to be held on and for said Village on April 1, 1976, for the purpose of submitting to the electors of said Village the following question:

Shall bonds in the amount of $2,225,000.00 be issued by the Village of Arlington Heights, Cook County, Illinois, for the purpose of paying the cost of constructing an addition to the existing Arlington Heights Memorial Library building and purchasing necessary equipment and furnishings therefor, and for the purpose of paying the cost of acquiring library materials, such as books, films, recordings, and similar materials, said bonds to bear interest at the rate of not to exceed seven per cent (7%) per annum?

Nixon in good physical, financial shape

by JACK V. FOX
SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Two years ago, on the evening of Aug. 8, 1974, Richard M. Nixon went on television from the White House to tell the American people he was resigning the Presidency.

Exactly one month later, his successor, Gerald Ford, granted Nixon a "full, free and absolute pardon" for any offenses he might have committed in office.

Now, in the seclusion of his Pacific coast home, the 63-year-old Nixon is preparing to watch from the spectator side of a television set the national convention of the Republican party.

NIXON HAS NOT been invited to Kansas City. Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan avoid his name. What could have been the cap of a triumphant eight years in the nation's highest office must be instead another bitter taste of the ashes of humiliation.

In the past two years, Nixon has had a close brush with death from blood clots. He made a nine-day trip to Red China where the one-time prosecutorial congressman who dogged Alger Hiss to jail was cheered by hundreds of thousands of Communists not impressed by Watergate.

Nixon's wife, Pat, has just returned home after a stroke which will require months of therapy to overcome paralysis.

Nixon himself now appears in excellent physical health for a man of his age. He was jaunty and seemed to have recovered weight as he wheeled Mrs. Nixon to a car.

ONE OF HIS MOST bothersome worries has been finances. But that now, too, seems to be in hand.

He has a substantial advance on a book of memoirs whose writings takes much of his time. He stands to make a handsome return on a forthcoming television interview series with David Frost. He gets a $60,000 annual salary as an ex-President plus $45,000 in staff expenses.

Nixon had been property poor. In addition to the 26-acre Casa Pacifica here, he owned two homes in Key Biscayne, Fla.

He bought them in 1969 for $125,000 and $128,000 respectively. He has recently sold the first for $320,000 and the second for $390,000.

BUT THE BASIC theme of Richard Nixon's life over the past two years has been isolation, exile, privacy, remoteness.

Except for the trip to China, he has not been out of California. He plays golf occasionally, usually on the course at the nearby Marine base of Camp Pendleton.

The Nixons go to few social events. They have been to a gathering at the Palm Springs estate of former ambassador to Britain Walter Annenberg, where Frank Sinatra recently took his fourth wife.

They dine out occasionally at restaurants in driving range. Ford visited Nixon in Long Beach Memorial Hospital during his bout with phlebitis and Sec. of State Henry Kissinger has called at San Clemente.

THEIR DAUGHTERS, Julie and Tricia, and their husbands, are frequent visitors at the estate.

A detachment of more than 20 Secret Service agents, paid for by the government, guards the Nixon home. A private guard at the entrance to the dozen houses on the compound surrounding Nixon's property turns away tourist cars.

It is next to impossible for the news media to get any information about Nixon or what he is doing.

Last week, UPI called his San Clemente number and got a secretary. The reporter asked how Mrs. Nixon was doing. "Fine," said the girl on the other end. Then she made the familiar remark that Nixon no longer has a press secretary and that she could not comment on any other matters.

There was a brief flap in June when a literary agent in New York announced plans to publish a book about Nixon's secret love affair with the wife of an American diplomat in Europe.

The agent beat a hasty retreat, saying that he was satisfied after talking with Nixon representatives that it was all an elaborate hoax.

There are reasons to believe, however, that after the Republicans choose a Presidential candidate and the November election is over, Nixon will re-emerge in public life.

He has a way of coming back.

Rabbi Korff still defending Nixon

by JOY STERLING
REHOBOTH, Mass. (UPI) — Rabbi Baruch Korff lives, though not quietly, for vindication. His loyalty to Richard M. Nixon knows no bounds.

Two years after Nixon's resignation, Korff is still running off press releases and making speeches in the former President's defense.

"I have an ego which is as big as an elephant, which also describes my politics," Korff says.

THE RABBI, who established the National Citizens' Committee for Fairness to the President in 1973, loves to play with power.

After Nixon's resignation, he founded the President Nixon Justice Fund to help pay the former President's legal expenses, convinced that someday he will be vindicated.

Korff hopes he will be credited with bringing to light what he considers the truth about Nixon.

"Everyday you learn from reading the papers that Nixon had no more vices, no more virtues than his predecessors or successor," Korff said. "A lot of my friends who left me when I first started defending the President are now seeing that."

"THEY ARE COMING back." Then, with a smile, he adds: "Good presidents make bad saints. And good saints make bad presidents."

The 64-year-old Korff stands straight and walks spryly. He has thick white hair and a rosy complexion that would be any woman's envy.

Interviewed at his rural 4-acre farm a dozen miles from Providence, Korff raised a finger to the skies at every mention of God. He wore a Richard Nixon tie clip even on an open-necked shirt.

"I am a small town rabbi who is not limited in his vision or aspirations," he said. "I wanted a pulpit where I could be a part and parcel of each human constellation in the congregation."

A RABBI traditionally takes on everybody's troubles, he said, adding, "I rather think it is in keeping with my faith to defend Nixon."

"I could relate to Nixon because of the oppression I felt in the war," he said. "I could not stand the inequity."

"I came to Nixon when he could do nothing for me," he said. "There's no gimmick. All I received was threats on my life, a substantial loss of my income, loss of many friends."

Korff draws a small pension from the Yeshiva Torah Emeth Synagogue in Taunton, Mass. and is the chaplain of two Massachusetts state institutions. He said he has dug into 40 years of saving to keep afloat.

FORMER PRESIDENT Richard M. Nixon announced his resignation on Aug. 8, 1974.

In a jam? Don't come crying to us.

"Write yourself a loan!"

Emergencies do happen. And sometimes your troubles are bigger than your bank balance. Wouldn't it be nice to write a check for the amount you need, and the bank would cover the darn thing for you? Best of all, what if you could pay it back in easy monthly installments, later on?

Well, that's exactly what "Check-Loan" lets credit-worthy folks do.

Wherever you are, whenever the need arises—nights, days or weekends—you can write yourself a loan by writing a check. If you qualify, we'll cover your "Check-Loan" check out of a line of credit established after you apply for "Check-Loan."

Then you can pay us back later . . . either all at once, or in monthly installments.

It's revolving credit, too. Each time you pay some back, you have that amount to use all over again.

Best of all, "Check-Loan" is totally free until the day you have to use it! And you only pay interest during the months when you actually owe us something.

To see if you qualify, ask about "Check-Loan" right now. You never know when it might save your life. Or at least your vacation.

Just being there isn't enough.

Police training course offered

The Cook County Sheriff's Police with Lewis University, Lockport, will offer a basic recruit training program Sept. 27-Nov. 26, Sheriff Richard J. Elrod has announced.

The basic course for law enforcement recruits is certified by the Illinois Local Governmental Law Enforcement Officers Training Board and will be conducted at the sheriff's police training academy in Maywood.

The program, open to full-time policemen, is a 10-week course combining nine weeks of classroom education and one week of field training.

Students who successfully complete the course will be eligible for college credit at Lewis University. Instructors will include officers of the Sheriff's police department and other law enforcement agencies and professors from Lewis University.

Alexian Brothers gains accreditation

Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, has received a one-year accreditation for its medical education program from the Illinois State Medical Society.

A new Illinois law makes continuing medical education mandatory for physicians' license renewal. In the past, license renewal was routine since there was no continuing professional or education requirements. Medical licenses in the state are renewed every two years on July 1.

Physicians receive credit for attending continuing medical education seminars which are designed to brief them on new medical techniques and practices.

6.6% ridership drop reported on bus system

Ridership on Des Plaines' intracity bus system between April and June of this year dropped 6.6 per cent from the first three months of the year.

Statistics released by the Regional Transportation Authority show the number of riders dropped from 14,453 during the first quarter, to 13,487 during the second quarter of the year on the four intracity bus routes.

The routes are funded by the RTA

2 robbers sell cigaretts, then flee with $800

Two armed bandits paused in their robbery of a Des Plaines service station to sell cigarettes to a passing motorist, and then fled with more than $800 in goods and cash, police reported Sunday.

To add insult to injury, the thieves pocketed money paid for the cigarette by the unwary motorist, police said.

Police said two men, one armed with a small-caliber revolver, walked into the Martin Oil Station at 1982 River Rd. at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, and ordered the manager of the station to hand over cash.

The robbery was interrupted by an unsuspecting driver in a pickup truck, who pulled into the station and asked for cigarettes, police said. One of the bandits reportedly sold him two packs of cigarettes, and the motorist drove away.

Another car pulled into the station, and the robbers ordered the manager to tell its driver the station was closed. He did so, and another unsuspecting motorist drove away, police said.

The robbers had the manager open the station's safe, and they took a moneybag containing $776.45, and $13 from a coin changer, police said. Also reported taken by the bandits were two cartons of cigarettes valued at $7.16, and a calculator valued at $12.

and are operated by the North Suburban Mass Transit District.

The intracity system consists of a south route (30), north route (31), west route (32) and southwest route (33).

DURING THE THREE-MONTH period ending June 30, ridership on the north route dropped from 2,160 to 1,540, the largest drop in the system.

Ridership on the west route dropped from 4,752 to 4,545 during the same period, and ridership on the southwest route dipped from 2,250 to 2,169.

The least change occurred on the south route, where ridership declines from 5,291 to 5,273.

Joseph DiJohn, executive director of NORTRAN, attributed the drop in ridership to cutbacks in service and warmer weather.

NORTRAN and the RTA eliminated Saturday service and early evening service on the intracity system June 13 because of poor ridership.

"I THINK THE CUTBACKS are part of the reason that ridership has dropped," DiJohn said. "I think we're operating more efficiently now, although you can't see that in the figures."

He said he expects ridership to increase substantially after school starts, especially if the RTA votes to lower fares from 45 cents to 35 cents.

"Frankly, the local routes are doing better than expected because this time of year usually is the real doldrums," he said. "Usually ridership falls off as much as 20 per cent, but it hasn't and that's a good sign. I'm not discouraged."

Ald. George Olen, 2nd, chairman of the city's transportation committee, said RTA officials have told him they will consider eliminating the north and southwest routes if ridership does not improve by Sept. 1.

THE BUS SYSTEM needs 6,000 riders a week to break-even, but now only averages between 1,000 and 1,100.

Intracity buses depart from the Chicago and North Western Ry. station and are designed to bring service to within six blocks of most homes in Des Plaines.

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

She didn't have a wagon to stand on but her pitch had a ring reminiscent of the old-time traveling medicine show barker. A cluster of curious potential converts was gathered around the woman, who was peddling ginseng tea at the Chicago Trade Exposition.

Ginseng appears to be the latest health food fad to sweep the country. Yet the term "latest fad" seems somehow inappropriate to describe a root that has been used by the Chinese for medicinal purposes since ancient times.

The botanical name for the ginseng plant comes from the Greek word for "panacea," which is an understatement of the claims made for ginseng.

Today

It is touted as a cure for stress, nervousness, sexual impotency, heart disease, heartburn, high blood pressure, tiredness, depression, insomnia, double vision, diarrhea, constipation, creaking joints, gray hair, baldness, old age and just about any other complaint you might have.

Advertising literature for ginseng quotes various studies, ranging from the plausible to the ridiculous, done in other countries including Sweden, Soviet Union, England, Switzerland, Germany, Bulgaria, Japan and the Bahamas. Last year many of these researchers gathered in Seoul, Korea, for the first international ginseng conference.

There apparently has been little

Tributes abound at Behrel dinner

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Saying goodbye to something you love isn't easy.

And it wasn't easy for Herbert H. Behrel to bid farewell Saturday night to 800 guests and 28 years of political service as a mayor and an alderman of Des Plaines at a retirement dinner in his honor.

Sporting a ten-gallon hat and using the same brisk voice and hardy laugh that has echoed in the city council chambers for nearly three decades,

Behrel admitted, "I'm leaving Des Plaines with mixed emotions."

"You can't cut off the right arm without having some bleeding, and that's what's happening tonight. I have been a part of this city so long, I will miss this city and job dearly," he said.

SEVERAL HOURS of serious words and the presentation of keepsakes served as testimony to the many accomplishments of the 70-year-old Behrel who is taking early leave of his unprecedented fifth term as mayor.

After-dinner speakers called him the catalyst behind supplying the city with Lake Michigan water from Chicago, creating flood-control programs, erecting a new civic center and adjoining police headquarters, and re-viving the downtown business district of Des Plaines with the construction of the Superblock complex.

And with that, the tributes began.

Ald. Charles Bolek, 3rd, who was sworn in Friday as the city's 10th mayor, presented Behrel with a city council resolution naming the new four-level parking garage, under construction on Ellinwood Street next to the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks, as "Behrel Plaza."

STATE SEN. Howard Mohr, R-Forest Park, presented a resolution passed by the Illinois Senate, wishing Behrel and his wife, Edyth, "the very best" as they retire to Sun City, Ariz.

Chicago's Deputy Mayor Kenneth Sain also was present to deliver personal greetings from Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley.

In the company of friends, family, state representatives and Cook County officials, Behrel was showered with gifts from the city's department heads, service districts and representatives from civic organizations who were eager to thank him for years of "cooperation and support."

The mementoes included a crystal ball, a specially designed Jim Beam whiskey bottle, a golf bag and clubs, a

40% reduction in electricity use

IBI, Edison investigate meter tampering

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Reports of tampering with Commonwealth Edison Co. electric meters throughout the Chicago metropolitan area are being probed by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation. The Herald has learned.

Robert W. Banks, an agent in the IBI's special investigations division, disclosed few specifics and refused to say when the investigation began. Banks said, however, the "active investigation regarding meter tampering" — sought by Commonwealth Edison — encompasses Chicago and its suburbs. "The Northwest suburbs are part of the Chicago metropolitan area," he said. Banks is heading the investigation.

Commonwealth Edison officials, reluctant to discuss the investigation, said the problem surfaced about March 1. "In our normal testing of meters we had come across a few that had been tampered with," said Jack J. Stephens, the company's district superintendent in the Northwest suburbs.

OFFICIALS SUSPECT meters are slowed down to record up to 40 per cent reductions in monthly electricity use. They estimated the annual loss to the company could amount to "thousands of dollars," but would not say exactly how much has been lost through meter tampering.

The company's electric meters are read once monthly at commercial establishments and once every two months in residential buildings. Commonwealth Edison serves nearly three million customers in Illinois.

"We found a lot of restaurants but not exclusively restaurants" with altered meters, said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in

Commonwealth Edison's meter department. Sachs said meter tampering is not confined to the Northwest suburbs. "It's the entire metropolitan area," he said.

Sachs said up to a 40 per cent drop in electricity use has been cited on certain monthly electric bills. He estimated the subsequent decline in the bill could net an annual savings of up to $10,000 for some restaurants, although the amounts may vary widely.

"The pattern on bills doesn't vary that much. It's easy to tell if there's a 25, 30 or 40 per cent drop in usage," Sachs said.

THERE ARE SEVERAL pieces of equipment on an electric meter that are adjustable. "The meter can be forced to misoperate," Stephens said. "The primary way, but not the only way it is done, is to slow the meter down."

Stephens said meter readers, although they are not experts, are the best detectors of tampering. "The meter men can work the dial and feel whether or not it's slipping," he said. "If it's slipping, someone's been in there playing around."

When asked if meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring, Sachs told The Herald, "Some of it may be. There are rumors that it's national."

"There are a lot of people around — electricians, for instance — that know what they're doing. It can be attractive to kids as well. It is not that difficult unfortunately. We can't have people doing this on an organized basis."

NEITHER COMMONWEALTH Edison official would confirm that the IBI is involved in an investigation. They said they were conducting their own "intense" companywide probe with the support of the Illinois Commerce Commission and a "professional" law enforcement agency.

"We have our own investigative forces, employees of the company, that can conduct an investigation if we direct them to," Sachs said.

The IBI has made no arrests, Banks said. He said if a suspect is caught tampering with electric meters he could be prosecuted for theft or conspiracy to commit theft. "If you had a meter in your home and you knew how to gear it down, you'd be using a lot more (electricity) than recorded," Bank explained, saying meter tamperers are guilty of stealing electrical energy.

For the most part, commercial meters are installed inside buildings. "If they're tampered with, there's only one conclusion," Stephens said. "It's your building." He said, however, it's impossible to prove meter tampering unless someone is caught in the act.

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Every American home has one stashed away in a closet somewhere.

It's a homeowner's guide — a colorful scrapbook of clothing, household goods and mechanical equipment.

Major department stores call them their merchandise mail order books. The average shopper calls them catalogs.

BUT PEOPLE LIKE Richard H. Nugent consider them an art form and much more than a convenient purchasing device. It's "art" because without that eye-catching appeal, the products don't sell.

Nugent, 61, has a vested interest in catalogs. He is president and founder of Nugent-Wenkus, Inc., an advertising art and photography firm based in Des Plaines that produces seasonal catalogs for stores like Sears, Roebuck & Co., Aldens and Jewel Food Stores.

His job, even 30 years after he started the company, still compares with that of a movie or theater director who strives for the perfect scene, who is the master of illusion.

The company's headquarters, 1100 Northwest Hwy., is a former greenhouse that contains a busy collage of prop storage rooms, film studios and dark rooms, artists, seamstresses, carpenters and photographers.

THE EFFORTS of about 100 employees there contribute to making things such as bath towels, folded and stacked in catalog pictures, seem fluffy as possible.

They are experts at making merchandise look picture perfect. Curtains are pressed and uniformly pinned in place, bedspreads and throw rugs are padded for softness, and even clothes on dolls are ironed and their curly locks brushed.

Producing catalog pictures is far different today than it was in the 1930s when Nugent, then a novice illustrator, used his talents to sketch pictures of sale products for catalogs.

"Those were the days of early photography. We drew everything for advertising purposes so there was always a need for illustrators. It was very intricate work," Nugent said. "There was a lot of fooling you could do with a pen that you can't do with a camera."

But, the pace of business today demands the use of a camera, he said, and the production of catalogs has become very routine.

FIRST, CLIENTS AND salesmen design pages for the catalogs or special Sunday newspaper advertising supplements.

A color scheme is worked out for the display, the necessary props are ordered, the scene is set up and photographed. It is sent to the printers once the client has approved the picture.

The preparation of one ad, from start to finish, can take several weeks, and there are thousands of ads that fill an average fall-winter, spring-summer catalog, he said.

If the scene requires models, they are flown in from New York or hired from a Chicago agency. If the ad requires food, it is prepared on the premises.

BACK DROPS are painted and repainted, wall-papered and tiled to meet the specifications of the advertising layout, Nugent said.

About 30 different room scenes, used in advertising dining room sets or living room furniture, can be photographed simultaneously in the firm's gymnasium-size gallery. The scenes are constructed and torn down within several days' time.

Sale merchandise and props used in the making of the ads are stacked high to the ceiling on storage shelves. Furniture, fake fireplaces, doorways, rolls of carpeting, racks of drapery and bathtubs are stored in a warehouse after use, he said.

"The toughest part about this job is getting rid of the stuff afterwards," Nugent said.

BUT, THE EASIEST part of the job has to be when clients are willing to pay for Nugent and his firm crew to take pictures of their outdoor sports and camping equipment, clothing and other items in a Florida or West Coast setting.

The company was located in what was once the Paradise Ballroom on Chicago's South Side before moving out to Des Plaines nine years ago at about the same time Joseph C. Wenkus joined up as executive vice president to handle the company's personnel and financial matters, Nugent said.

"My heart is still in the production end of the business," he said. "The people in this business still interest me the most. We have an awful lot of fun at this."

Negotiations set today

Mediator enters Lag pact talks

Officials of the Lag Drug Co., Des Plaines, and striking Teamsters Union employees will meet today with a federal mediator in an attempt to end the one-week-old strike against the company.

The 120 employees, members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters Local 743, are on strike over what they call "the company's refusal to negotiate a decent contract." They walked off the job after their contract expired July 31.

Rudy Lynch, a union steward, said union and company officials will meet with the federal mediator at 1 p.m. in the Dirksen Federal Building, 215 S. Dearborn St., Chicago. It will be the first meeting between the two sides since the strike began.

"We have a meeting with the company and hopefully we'll get something accomplished," Lynch said. "I hope we can resolve it. Everybody here wants to resolve it and I think the company should do."

MOST OF THE striking employees at the Lag Drug Co., a wholesale distributor of drugs, work as order fillers and dock workers.

Officials of the company have been unavailable for comment since the strike began. The strike reportedly is the first in the company's history.

Lynch said although "numerous issues" remain unresolved, the primary stumbling block in the contract talks is a provision that would require employees to work Saturdays upon the request of the company.

"The employees do not think that it should be mandatory for them to work on Saturday if it is requested by the company," he said.

THE COMPANY recently moved from Chicago to its Des Plaines location, he said, and company management wants the employees to work Saturdays to help set up operations.

Lynch said although the economic package offered by the company "could be improved," he does not believe it is a primary stumbling block. He refused to say how much the union is seeking.

"We'll negotiate if the company is willing to talk to us," he said. "We're willing to compromise."

Lynch said although about 30 to 35 administrative, security and office employees have crossed picket lines, he said the strike has stopped the company's operations.

Although workers have begun to feel the financial pinch from being on strike, Lynch said they are prepared to stay off their jobs until an acceptable settlement is reached.

"When you talk about working people of course they're going to feel it," he said. "But the people are together like they've never been before. They're not going to give in to the pressure."

Budget review on Dist. 214 agenda

A $48 million tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year will be reviewed by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education today.

The budget calls for a 6.58 per cent increase in expenditures from last year's $45 million budget.

The district anticipates receiving $47 million in revenue this year from property taxes, state aid and other sources, a 4.9 per cent increase from last year's $45 million.

Included in the revenue projections is $11 million from state aid, a 14.4 per cent increase from the $9.8 million received last year. The district also expects to receive $28.7 million from property taxes.

A breakdown of the budget by the five major funds — the education, building, transportation, bond and interest, and municipal retirement funds — will not be available until the board meeting.

The board will review the budget and set the date for a public hearing at 8 p.m. Monday at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

800 honor Behrel at farewell dinner

PROCEEDS FROM the $20-a-plate dinner at the Sheraton O'Hare, Rosemont, were used in part to purchase an electric golf cart for Behrel.

City employees, including City Clerk

Eleanor Rohrbach, chairman of the committee which coordinated the dinner, gifted the mayor with about five hours of sound movies taken of him during the past year at city council meetings, talking with Gov. Daniel Walker, topping-off ceremonies at the 10-story Superblock office building and playing golf.

The presentations came from old friends of the city like the Village of Mount Prospect and from new additions to the community like Oakton Community College between piano bars of "Roll Out the Barrel."

But, the gaiety in remembering times past gave way to solemn silence when Behrel was presented with the American and City of Des Plaines flags that were flown over city hall Friday, his last day in office.

A MISTY-EYED Behrel finally took the podium after guests sang "Auld Lang Syne" and gave him a standing ovation.

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

She didn't have a wagon to stand on but her pitch had a ring reminiscent of the old-time traveling medicine show barker. A cluster of curious potential converts was gathered around the woman, who was peddling ginseng tea at the Chicago Trade Exposition.

Ginseng appears to be the latest health food fad to sweep the country. Yet the term "latest fad" seems somehow inappropriate to describe a root that has been used by the Chinese for medicinal purposes since ancient times.

The botanical name for the ginseng plant comes from the Greek word for "panacea," which is an understatement of the claims made for ginseng.

Today

It is touted as a cure for stress, nervousness, sexual impotency, heart disease, heartburn, high blood pressure, tiredness, depression, insomnia, double vision, diarrhea, constipation, creaking joints, gray hair, baldness, old age and just about any other complaint you might have.

Advertising literature for ginseng quotes various studies, ranging from the plausible to the ridiculous, done in other countries including Sweden, Soviet Union, England, Switzerland, Germany, Bulgaria, Japan and the Bahamas. Last year many of these researchers gathered in Seoul, Korea, for the first international ginseng conference.

There apparently has been little

Monoson arraignment today on bribe charges

Former Wheeling Village Trustee Gilbert J. Monoson will be arraigned today in Cook County Circuit Court Criminal Division on charges of bribery and official misconduct.

Monoson will appear at 9:30 a.m. before Judge Richard Fitzgerald at the Criminal Court Building.

Monoson, who ran for office in 1975 on a reform ticket, was indicted July 29 by a Cook County Grand Jury. Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said Monoson is charged with three counts of bribery, one count of attempted bribery and four counts of official misconduct in connection with a zoning variation requested in June by GEC Industries, 422 Mercantile Ct., Wheeling.

CAREY SAID MONOSON allegedly asked George Carpin, president of GEC Industries, for a $10,000 "no collateral" loan in return for Monoson using his influence to obtain a zoning variation and occupancy permit for the company. Monoson is chairman of the village real estate and zoning committee.

Carpin in June asked the village board to grant a zoning variation so he would not have to install sprinklers or a fire wall in a recently completed addition to his building. The board denied the request 6-0 and later told Carpin it would revoke his business license by September if the addition is not in compliance. The village also refused to issue an occupancy permit for the addition.

Carey said Monoson first visited the factory in June or early July to inspect the building for a report to the board. He said Monoson allegedly returned in July and asked for the $10,000 no collateral loan in return for his influence in obtaining the zoning variation and occupancy permit.

CARPIN REPORTED the incident to the state's attorney's office July 21 and was equipped with a recording device for a second meeting the next day when Monoson allegedly repeated his offer.

Monoson resigned from the board July 30 saying the indictment makes "it impossible for me to continue." He said he leaves the board with the knowledge "that I have not violated the law."

If convicted, Monoson faces a maximum sentence of three years in prison or a fine of $10,000.

Village expected to OK 80% water rate hike

An 80 per cent increase in village water rates is expected to be approved tonight by Wheeling trustees.

The board will meet at 8 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

The rate of 90 cents per 1,000 gallons was proposed by Assistant Village Mgr. Thomas Markus, who said the rate hike is needed to make necessary improvements to the village water system. The current rate is 50 cents per 1,000 gallons.

Markus said the water rate increase would generate an additional $280,000 a year for water system improvements, which will cost an estimated $5 million. The improvements are being reviewed by village officials.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS estimate the average resident uses 20,000 gallons of water every three months at the cost of $17.50. Under the proposed rate, the average user would pay $25.50 every three months.

Village Mgr. Terry L. Zerkle said improvements to the water system are "necessary for the health and safety of the residents." Improvements to the system are scheduled to begin this year.

Larry Oppenheimer, public works director, said improvements planned for this year include upgrading water distribution to the southwest section of town, which includes Tahoe Village, Lakeside Villas, Mallard Lake apartments, VIP apartments and Lake of the Winds apartments. An engineering study of Wheeling's water system revealed low pressure in that area could cause trouble during a fire.

Markus said revenues from the proposed increase would be used only as "seed money" for upgrading the system, saying it would not cover the entire cost of the $5 million in improvements.

Wheeling officials said they probably will issue a combination of general obligation and revenue bonds to finance the necessary improvements to the system.

IBI, Edison probe meter tampering

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Reports of tampering with Commonwealth Edison Co. electric meters throughout the Chicago metropolitan area are being probed by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, The Herald has learned.

Robert W. Banks, an agent in the IBI's special investigations division, disclosed few specifics and refused to say when the investigation began. Banks said, however, the "active investigation regarding meter tampering" — sought by Commonwealth Edison — encompasses Chicago and its suburbs. "The Northwest suburbs are part of the Chicago metropolitan area," he said. Banks is heading the investigation.

Commonwealth Edison officials, reluctant to discuss the investigation, said the problem surfaced about March 1. "In our normal testing of meters we had come across a few that had been tampered with," said Jack J. Stephens, the company's district superintendent in the Northwest suburbs.

OFFICIALS SUSPECT meters are slowed down to record up to 40 per cent reductions in monthly electricity use. They estimated the annual loss to the company could amount to "thousands of dollars," but would not say exactly how much has been lost through meter tampering.

The company's electric meters are read once monthly at commercial establishments and once every two months in residential buildings. Commonwealth Edison serves nearly three million customers in Illinois.

"We found a lot of restaurants but not exclusively restaurants" with altered meters, said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in Commonwealth Edison's meter department. Sachs said meter tampering is not confined to the Northwest suburbs. "It's the entire metropolitan area," he said.

Sachs said up to a 40 per cent drop in electricity use has been cited on certain monthly electric bills. He estimated the subsequent decline in the bill could net an annual savings of up to $10,000 for some restaurants, although the amounts may vary widely.

"The pattern on bills doesn't vary that much. It's easy to tell if there's a 25, 30 or 40 per cent drop in usage," Sachs said.

THERE ARE SEVERAL pieces of equipment on an electric meter that are adjustable. "The meter can be forced to misoperate," Stephens said. "The primary way, but not the only way it is done, is to slow the meter down."

Stephens said meter readers, although they are not experts, are the best detectors of tampering. "The meter men can work the dial and feel whether or not it's slipping," he said. "If it's slipping, someone's been in there playing around."

When asked if meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring, Sachs told The Herald, "Some of it may be. There are rumors that it's national."

"There are a lot of people around — electricians, for instance — that know what they're doing. It can be attractive to kids as well. It is not that difficult unfortunately. We can't have people doing this on an organized basis."

NEITHER COMMONWEALTH Edison official would confirm that the IBI is involved in an investigation. They said they were conducting their own "intense" companywide probe with the support of the Illinois Commerce Commission and a "professional" law enforcement agency.

"We have our own investigative forces, employees of the company, that can conduct an investigation if we direct them to," Sachs said.

The IBI has made no arrests, Banks said. He said if a suspect is caught tampering with electric meters he could be prosecuted for theft or conspiracy to commit theft. "If you had a meter in your home and you knew how to gear it down, you'd be using a lot more (electricity) than recorded," Bank explained, saying meter tamperers are guilty of stealing electrical energy.

For the most part, commercial meters are installed inside buildings. "If they're tampered with, there's only one conclusion," Stephens said. "It's your building." He said, however, it's impossible to prove meter tampering unless someone is caught in the act.

Plan panel urges 2 reappointments

The Buffalo Grove Plan Commission has recommended that the village board reappoint commissioners Patrick Shields and Melvin Kandel.

Shields, who has been on the commission since 1973, was recommended for a two-year term. Kandel, who was first appointed last October, was recommended for a one-year term.

Picture-perfect catalogs — a form of art that sells

Photographer Norbert Badowski.

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Every American home has one stashed away in a closet somewhere.

It's a homeowner's guide — a colorful scrapbook of clothing, household goods and mechanical equipment.

Major department stores call them their merchandise mail order books. The average shopper calls them catalogs.

BUT PEOPLE LIKE Richard H. Nugent consider them an art form and much more than a convenient purchasing device. It's "art" because without that eye-catching appeal, the products don't sell.

Nugent, 61, has a vested interest in catalogs. He is president and founder of Nugent-Wenkus, Inc., an advertising art and photography firm based in Des Plaines that produces seasonal catalogs for stores like Sears, Roebuck & Co., Aldens and Jewel Food Stores.

His job, even 30 years after he started the company, still compares with that of a movie or theater director who strives for the perfect scene, who is the master of illusion.

The company's headquarters, 1100 Northwest Hwy., is a former greenhouse that contains a busy collage of prop storage rooms, film studios and dark rooms, artists, seamstresses, carpenters and photographers.

THE EFFORTS of about 100 employees there contribute to making things such as bath towels, folded and stacked in catalog pictures, seem fluff. They are experts at making merchandise look picture perfect. Curtains are pressed and uniformly pinned in place, bedspreads and throw rugs are padded for softness, and even clothes on dolls are ironed and their curly locks brushed.

Producing catalog pictures is far different today than it was in the 1930s when Nugent, then a novice illustrator, used his talents to sketch pictures of sale products for catalogs.

"Those were the days of early photography. We drew everything for advertising purposes so there was always a need for illustrators. It was very intricate work," Nugent said. "There was a lot of fooling you could do with a pen that you can't do with a camera."

But, the pace of business today demands the use of a camera, he said, and the production of catalogs has become very routine.

FIRST, CLIENTS and salesmen design pages for the catalogs or special Sunday newspaper advertising supplements.

A color scheme is worked out for the display, the necessary props are ordered, the scene is set up and photographed. It is sent to the printers once the client has approved the picture.

The preparation of one ad, from start to finish, can take several weeks, and there are thousands of ads that fill an average fall-winter, spring-summer catalog, he said.

If the scene requires models, they are flown in from New York or hired from a Chicago agency. If the ad requires food, it is prepared on the premises.

BACK DROPS are painted and re-painted, wall-papered and tiled to meet the specifications of the advertising layout, Nugent said.

About 30 different room scenes, used in advertising dining room sets or living room furniture, can be photographed simultaneously in the firm's gymnasium-size gallery. The scenes are constructed and torn down within several days' time.

Sale merchandise and props used in the making of the ads are stacked high to the ceiling on storage shelves.

Furniture, fake fireplaces, doorways, rolls of carpeting, racks of drapery and bathtubs are stored in a warehouse after use, he said.

"The toughest part about this job is getting rid of the stuff afterwards," Nugent said.

BUT, THE EASIEST part of the job has to be when clients are willing to pay for Nugent and his film crew to take pictures of their outdoor sports and camping equipment, clothing and other items in a Florida or West Coast setting.

The company was located in what was once the Paradise Ballroom on Chicago's South Side before moving out to Des Plaines nine years ago at about the same time Joseph C. Wenkus joined up as executive vice president to handle the company's personnel and financial matters, Nugent said.

"My heart is still in the production end of the business," he said. "The people in this business still interest me the most. We have an awful lot of fun at this."

$2 million budget topic of Dist. 96 meet tonight

The Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 Board of Education tonight will review a tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year amounting to more than $2 million.

The board will consider the budget at 8 p.m. at Kildeer Countryside School, Long Grove.

Total expenditures in the proposed budget are $2,027,990. Anticipated revenue is $1,446,199. The district will dip into its surplus cash balance to cover the $581,800 deficit.

THIS YEAR'S budget is a 6.2 per cent increase over last year's $1.9 million budget. The new budget projects a $471,241 balance at the end of the 1977 fiscal year, left over from 1975-76 surplus cash.

The education fund, which is the largest fund and pays for salaries and programs, will have $1,273,977 in expenditures with $1,007,923 in revenue from taxes, state aid and other sources. Expenditures in this fund increased 5.8 per cent over last year's costs.

The education fund contains a 3 per cent step salary increase for teachers, but it does not reflect the total increase being negotiated with staff members. Teachers have asked the board for a 9 per cent raise in salary and fringe benefits, said Frances Alton, business manager. No contract settlement has been reached.

Revenue for the operations, building and maintenance fund is projected at $137,143, while costs are anticipated at $248,094, a 17.4 per cent increase from last year.

A referendum to raise taxes in the operations fund to offset the fund's deficit was rejected by voters in May. The operations fund covers custodial salaries, utilities and supplies.

THE TRANSPORTATION fund shows a 55 per cent increase in expenditures with $77,920 budgeted compared to $50,056 in the 1975-76 budget. Revenue projected for this fund is $63,123.

The proposed budget also includes:

- Bond and interest fund, $180,063 expenditures compared to $175,094 last year.

- Retirement fund, $29,895, a decrease of 5.4 per cent from last year's expenditure of $31,600.

- Construction fund, $83,050, a 4.6 per cent drop from last year's $87,100.

Mrs. Alton said the budget figures cannot be finalized until the district finds out its 1975 assessed valuation.

Annual Jaycees picnic set Aug. 28

The Buffalo Grove Jaycees will sponsor its annual family picnic from 3 p.m. until dark Aug. 28 at the Lake-wood Forest Preserve, Ill. Rte. 176 and Fairfield Road, Wauconda.

Games are scheduled and supplies will be available for badminton, baseball and volleyball. Beer and soft drinks will be available all day, with dinner beginning about 4:30 p.m.

Members are asked to bring one meat dish and a salad, vegetable or dessert. Interested persons can contact John Panellas at 541-3144 to register.

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

She didn't have a wagon to stand on but her pitch had a ring reminiscent of the old-time traveling medicine show barker. A cluster of curious potential converts was gathered around the woman, who was peddling ginseng tea at the Chicago Trade Exposition.

Ginseng appears to be the latest health food fad to sweep the country. Yet the term "latest fad" seems somehow inappropriate to describe a root that has been used by the Chinese for medicinal purposes since ancient times.

The botanical name for the ginseng plant comes from the Greek word for "panacea," which is an understatement of the claims made for ginseng.

Today

It is touted as a cure for stress, nervousness, sexual impotency, heart disease, heartburn, high blood pressure, tiredness, depression, insomnia, double vision, diarrhea, constipation, creaking joints, gray hair, baldness, old age and just about any other complaint you might have.

Advertising literature for ginseng quotes various studies, ranging from the plausible to the ridiculous, done in other countries including Sweden, Soviet Union, England, Switzerland, Germany, Bulgaria, Japan and the Bahamas. Last year many of these researchers gathered in Seoul, Korea, for the first international ginseng conference.

There apparently has been little

Dist. 96 to review $2 million budget tonight

The Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 Board of Education tonight will review a tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year amounting to more than $2 million.

The board will consider the budget at 8 p.m. at Kildeer Countryside School, Long Grove.

Total expenditures in the proposed budget are $2,027,999. Anticipated revenue is $1,446,199. The district will dip into its surplus cash balance to cover the $581,800 deficit.

THIS YEAR'S budget is a 6.2 per cent increase over last year's $1.9 million budget. The new budget projects a $471,241 balance at the end of the 1977 fiscal year, left over from 1975-76 surplus cash.

The education fund, which is the largest fund and pays for salaries and programs, will have $1,273,977 in expenditures with $1,007,923 in revenue from taxes, state aid and other sources. Expenditures in this fund increased 5.8 per cent over last year's costs.

The education fund contains a 3 per cent step salary increase for teachers, but it does not reflect the total increase being negotiated with staff members. Teachers have asked the board for a 9 per cent raise in salary and fringe benefits, said Frances Alton, business manager. No contract settlement has been reached.

Revenue for the operations, building and maintenance fund is projected at $137,143, while costs are anticipated at $248,094, a 17.4 per cent increase from last year.

A referendum to raise taxes in the operations fund to offset the fund's deficit was rejected by voters in May. The operations fund covers custodial salaries, utilities and supplies.

THE TRANSPORTATION fund shows a 55 per cent increase in expenditures with $77,920 budgeted compared to $50,056 in the 1975-76 budget. Revenue projected for this fund is $63,123.

The proposed budget also includes:

- Bond and interest fund, $180,063 expenditures compared to $175,094 last year.

- Retirement fund, $29,895, a decrease of 5.4 per cent from last year's expenditure of $31,600.

- Construction fund, $83,050, a 4.6 per cent drop from last year's $87,100.

Mrs. Alton said the budget figures cannot be finalized until the district finds out its 1975 assessed valuation.

Budget review on Dist. 214 agenda

A $48 million tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year will be reviewed by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education today.

The budget calls for a 6.50 per cent increase in expenditures from last year's $45 million budget.

The district anticipates receiving $47 million in revenue this year from property taxes, state aid and other sources, a 4.9 per cent increase from last year's $45 million.

Included in the revenue projections is $11 million from state aid, a 14.4 per cent increase from the $9.8 million received last year. The district also expects to receive $28.7 million from property taxes.

Ridership down 17% on buses

Ridership on the Buffalo Grove commuter bus service dropped 17 per cent last week during the first week of 40-cent fares.

Claude Luisada, a member of the Buffalo Grove Transportation Committee, which oversees the service between Buffalo Grove and the Arlington Heights train station, said an average of 168 passengers rode the bus the first four days of last week, compared with 202 the week before.

He said a peak ridership of 213 was reached July 26.

"The ridership fell slightly (last week) but I think it was for other reasons than the fares," Luisada said.

TWO RUNS were missed Monday, causing ridership for that day to fall to 138, he said. He also attributed the lower passenger rate to a rainy Tuesday and a heavy vacation period.

Luisada said the ridership is expected to increase as the summer vacation season ends and more information is released to the public on the route.

He said the North Suburban Mass Transit District, which operates the service, is considering adding another bus to the route and offering a 10-15 per cent discount for regular riders.

Luisada said the fare may be reduced from 40 to 35 cents later this year if funds are released following court approval of the Regional Transportation Authority budget.

Ridership could reach 300 by early next year if another bus is put on the route, Luisada said. Several months ago, officials were hoping for an average ridership of 158 passengers per day to guarantee full RTA funding.

Jaycees' planning meeting Wednesday

The Buffalo Grove Jaycees will meet 8 p.m. Wednesday to discuss plans for Buffalo Grove Days concessions.

The meeting will be at the home of Benjamin McQueen, 328 Cottonwood Rd.

The Jaycees also are working on a float to be entered in the Buffalo Grove Days Parade.

July's Jaycee of the month was Robert Anderson, 86 Bernard Dr. He was cited as "versatile, willing and ready to help members."

IBI, Edison investigate meter tampering

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Reports of tampering with Commonwealth Edison Co. electric meters throughout the Chicago metropolitan area are being probed by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, The Herald has learned.

Robert W. Banks, an agent in the IBI's special investigations division, disclosed few specifics and refused to say when the investigation began. Banks said, however, the "active investigation regarding meter tampering" — sought by Commonwealth Edison — encompasses Chicago and its suburbs. "The Northwest suburbs are part of the Chicago metropolitan area," he said. Banks is heading the investigation.

Commonwealth Edison officials, reluctant to discuss the investigation, said the problem surfaced about March 1. "In our normal testing of meters we had come across a few that had been tampered with," said

See related story, Page 5

Jack J. Stephens, the company's district superintendent in the Northwest suburbs.

OFFICIALS SUSPECT meters are slowed down to record up to 40 per cent reductions in monthly electricity use. They estimated the annual loss to the company could amount to "thousands of dollars," but would not say exactly how much has been lost through meter tampering.

The company's electric meters are read once monthly at commercial establishments and once every two months in residential buildings. Commonwealth Edison serves nearly three million customers in Illinois.

"We found a lot of restaurants but not exclusively restaurants" with altered meters, said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in

Commonwealth Edison's meter department. Sachs said meter tampering is not confined to the Northwest suburbs. "It's the entire metropolitan area," he said.

Sachs said up to a 40 per cent drop in electricity use has been cited on certain monthly electric bills. He estimated the subsequent decline in the bill could net an annual savings of up to $10,000 for some restaurants, although the amounts may vary widely.

"The pattern on bills doesn't vary that much. It's easy to tell if there's a 25, 30 or 40 per cent drop in usage," Sachs said.

THERE ARE SEVERAL pieces of equipment on an electric meter that are adjustable. "The meter can be forced to misoperate," Stephens said. "The primary way, but not the only way it is done, is to slow the meter down."

Stephens said meter readers, although they are not experts, are the best detectors of tampering. "The meter men can work the dial and feel whether or not it's slipping," he said. "If it's slipping, someone's been in there playing around."

When asked if meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring, Sachs told The Herald, "Some of it may be. There are rumors that it's national."

"There are a lot of people around — electricians, for instance — that know what they're doing. It can be attractive to kids as well. It is not that difficult unfortunately. We can't have people doing this on an organized basis."

NEITHER COMMONWEALTH Edison official would confirm that the IBI is involved in an investigation. They said they were conducting their own "intense" companywide probe with the support of the Illinois Commerce Commission and a "professional" law enforcement agency.

"We have our own investigative forces, employees of the company, that can conduct an investigation if we direct them to," Sachs said.

The IBI has made no arrests, Banks said. He said if a suspect is caught tampering with electric meters he could be prosecuted for theft or conspiracy to commit theft. "If you had a meter in your home and you knew how to gear it down, you'd be using a lot more (electricity) than recorded," Banks explained, saying meter tamperers are guilty of stealing electrical energy.

For the most part, commercial meters are installed inside buildings. "If they're tampered with, there's only one conclusion," Stephens said. "It's your building." He said, however, it's impossible to prove meter tampering unless someone is caught in the act.

Picture-perfect catalogs — a form of art that sells

Photographer Norbert Badowski.

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Every American home has one stashed away in a closet somewhere.

It's a homeowner's guide — a colorful scrapbook of clothing, household goods and mechanical equipment. Major department stores call them their merchandise mail order books. The average shopper calls them catalogs.

BUT PEOPLE LIKE Richard H. Nugent consider them an art form and much more than a convenient purchasing device. It's "art" because without that eye-catching appeal, the products don't sell.

Nugent, 61, has a vested interest in catalogs. He is president and founder of Nugent-Wenckus, Inc., an advertising art and photography firm based in Des Plaines that produces seasonal catalogs for stores like Sears, Roebuck & Co., Aldens and Jewel Food Stores.

His job, even 30 years after he started the company, still compares with that of a movie or theater director who strives for the perfect scene, who is the master of illusion.

The company's headquarters, 1100 Northwest Hwy., is a former greenhouse that contains a busy collage of prop storage rooms, film studios and dark rooms, artists, seamstresses, carpenters and photographers.

THE EFFORTS of about 100 employees there contribute to making things such as bath towels, folded and stacked in catalog pictures, seem fluffy as possible.

They are experts at making merchandise look picture perfect. Curtains are pressed and uniformly pinned in place, bedspreads and throw rugs are padded for softness, and even clothes on dolls are ironed and their curly locks brushed.

Producing catalog pictures is far different today than it was in the 1930s when Nugent, then a novice illustrator, used his talents to sketch pictures of sale products for catalogs.

"Those were the days of early photography. We drew everything for advertising purposes so there was always a need for illustrators. It was very intricate work," Nugent said. "There was a lot of fooling you could do with a pen that you can't do with a camera."

But, the pace of business today demands the use of a camera, he said, and the production of catalogs has become very routine.

FIRST, CLIENTS and salesmen design pages for the catalogs or special Sunday newspaper advertising supplements.

A color scheme is worked out for the display, the necessary props are ordered, the scene is set up and photographed. It is sent to the printers once the client has approved the picture.

The preparation of one ad, from start to finish, can take several weeks, and there are thousands of ads that fill an average fall-winter, spring-summer catalog, he said.

If the scene requires models, they are flown in from New York or hired from a Chicago agency. If the ad requires food, it is prepared on the premises.

BACK DROPS are painted and re-painted, wall-papered and tiled to meet the specifications of the advertising layout, Nugent said.

About 30 different room scenes, used in advertising dining room sets or living room furniture, can be photographed simultaneously in the firm's gymnasium-size gallery. The scenes are constructed and torn down within several days' time.

Sale merchandise and props used in the making of the ads are stacked high to the ceiling on storage shelves. Furniture, fake fireplaces, doorways, rolls of carpeting, racks of drapery and bathtubs are stored in a warehouse after use, he said.

"The toughest part about this job is getting rid of the stuff afterwards," Nugent said.

BUT, THE EASIEST part of the job has to be when clients are willing to pay for Nugent and his film crew to take pictures of their outdoor sports and camping equipment, clothing and other items in a Florida or West Coast setting.

The company was located in what was once the Paradise Ballroom on Chicago's South Side before moving out to Des Plaines nine years ago at about the same time Joseph C. Wenckus joined up as executive vice president to handle the company's personnel and financial matters, Nugent said.

"My heart is still in the production end of the business," he said. "The people in this business still interest me the most. We have an awful lot of fun at this."

Cigarette-selling bandits take $800

Two armed bandits paused in their robbery of a Des Plaines service station to sell cigarettes to a passing motorist, and then fled with more than $800 in goods and cash, police reported Sunday.

To add insult to injury, the thieves pocketed money paid for the cigarette by the unwary motorist, police said.

Police said two men, one armed with a small-caliber revolver, walked into the Martin Oil Station at 1982 River Rd. at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, and ordered the manager of the station to hand over cash.

The robbery was interrupted by an unsuspecting driver in a pickup truck.

who pulled into the station and asked for cigarettes, police said. One of the bandits reportedly sold him two packs of cigarettes, and the motorist drove away.

Another car pulled into the station, and the robbers ordered the manager to tell its driver the station was closed. He did so, and another unsuspecting motorist drove away, police said.

The robbers had the manager open the station's safe, and they took a moneybag containing $778.45, and $13 from a coin changer, police said. Also reported taken by the bandits were two cartons of cigarettes valued at $7.46, and a calculator valued at $12.

Meter 'fixers' approach merchants

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Mount Prospect merchants have been approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters in what Commonwealth Edison Co. officials believe is a major meter tampering scheme in the area.

Utility company officials also have said electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of that scheme. The company, however, would not release the names of the restaurants.

Two downtown merchants, when asked if they wanted their meters fixed, refused the offer.

"IT WOULD HAVE BEEN STUPID," said Edward Pung, owner of the Town Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St. Pung said a man calling himself John P. Jones was doing some electrical work in the snack shop prior to its opening in March. "He asked me if I wanted to save enough to buy a Cadillac," Pung said. "He said it would cost me $30 a month."

Pung, a Wheeling resident, refused to have his meter tampered with and said he threw the man out of his restaurant.

Donald P. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., said he was confronted in January by a man also named "John." Moss said the man told him "he had the tags necessary to set back both water and electric meters."

Moss, a resident of Rolling Meadows, said he was told his monthly bills would be reduced from $250 to $75 if he went along with the scheme. Moss also refused, saying his bills have only been between $60 and $70 monthly since his shop opened in February.

"I NEVER HEARD OF IT (meter tampering) before he came in here," Moss said. "I was impressed he could do it, but I told him I don't need his services. He told me we both could make money on it."

Commonwealth Edison officials have discovered up to 40 per cent declines in electric bills of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants. The utility said it has billed those businesses on a prorated basis to compensate for the monetary loss. It is impossible to accuse someone of meter tampering unless he is caught in the act, company officials said.

"To the best of my knowledge they have been billed," said Frederick M.

Sachs, administrative engineer in Commonwealth Edison's meter department. "I don't know if we've received payment. Upon discovery of tampering we could immediately disconnect service. Service would not be restored until he pays what he owes us."

SACHS SAID the company is convinced meter tampering is a widespread problem and is not confined to Mount Prospect. He said there is little the company can do, though, unless someone actually is seen tampering with a meter. Sachs added Mount Prospect has provided some of the best leads to assist the firm in an ongoing investigation into meter tampering.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley in June began his own investigation into possible tampering with village water meters after learning of the areawide scheme. Village water bills were checked as far back as 1972 and no significant drops were cited on the bills. "We're not seeing anything that looks suspicious," Eppley said.

When he learned that there was some electric meter tampering occurring in the village Eppley said, "I'm angry this is going on and nothing's happening. I don't want to be the manager of a town that houses a group that is screwing the public."

Hay fever sufferers rejoice

Weed complaints drop, village officials report

by TOM VON MALDER

The hay fever season is here and many a watery eye is casting an apprehensive glance at a patch of overgrown, unattended weeds.

Elk Grove Village officials, however, report a decrease in the number of weed complaints so far this summer.

"We've only had about half the complaints," said Barbara Watson, village sanitarian. Health department records show only 26 complaints have been reported so far this year.

Although the number of complaints for last year were not available, Health Coordinator Nancy Yiannias told the village board during budget sessions that she spent 50 per cent of her time last summer handling weed complaints.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS credit new construction, little rain and warning letters for the reduction in weed complaints.

Gary E. Parrin, village administrative assistant, said houses and shopping centers have been built on several properties which had weed problems in previous years.

Mrs. Watson agreed, adding, "We have about five spots in the village which are chronic problems. I'm happy to see though that three of them have 'for sale' signs now."

Several officials said the dry summer diminished the normal weed growth, although Mrs. Watson said that compared to residents' lawns, the weeds have grown "joyously."

PROPERTY OWNERS whose land had problem weeds last year were sent letters in the spring. About 24 letters went out reminding owners of the weed ordinance and asking their cooperation.

Parrin said the letters apparently have been effective.

Fines up to $10 per day can be charged to property owners violating the eight-inch height limitation set by village ordinance.

The ordinance also gives the village power to trim weeds and bill the property owner or occupant if they fail to cut the weeds within 10 days after written notice.

This "force cut" provision is seldom used in the industrial park because of the difficulty in discovering the identity of property owners. Much of the industrial land is held by secret land trusts.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS said the industrial area weeds create the greatest problem if they are near a residential area, such as the fields along Landmeier and Tonne roads and Live-ly Boulevard.

2 robbers sell cigarets, then flee with $800

Two armed bandits paused in their robbery of a Des Plaines service station to sell cigarettes to a passing motorist, and then fled with more than $800 in goods and cash, police reported Sunday.

To add insult to injury, the thieves pocketed money paid for the cigarette by the unwary motorist, police said.

Police said two men, one armed with a small-caliber revolver, walked into the Martin Oil Station at 1982 River Rd. at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, and ordered the manager of the station to hand over cash.

The robbery was interrupted by an unsuspecting driver in a pickup truck, who pulled into the station and asked for cigarettes, police said. One of the bandits reportedly sold him two packs of cigarettes, and the motorist drove away.

Another car pulled into the station, and the robbers ordered the manager to tell its driver the station was closed. He did so, and another unsuspecting motorist drove away, police said.

The robbers had the manager open the station's safe, and they took a moneybag containing $776.45, and $13 from a coin changer, police said. Also reported taken by the bandits were two cartons of cigarettes valued at $7.46, and a calculator valued at $12.

Road work detour expected soon

Elk Grove Village commuters who take Milwaukee Road trains from Itasca soon will have to detour around DuPage County Highway Dept. construction at the intersection of Arlington Heights and Thorndale roads.

The work, which involves raising the level of the intersection about a foot, probably will be completed sometime this week, according to Ray Dreher, DuPage County highway engineer. He said new curbs and gutters already have been installed at the intersection.

Dreher said motorists will be able to use Wooddale Road rather than Arlington Heights Road to enter Itasca. Wooddale Road recently was closed for widening.

The intersection project is part of an improvement of Thorndale Road, which is being widened from 28 feet to 48 feet from I-90 to O'Hare Airport.

Budget review on agenda of Dist. 214 today

A $48 million tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year will be reviewed by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education today.

The budget calls for a 6.58 per cent increase in expenditures from last year's $45 million budget.

The district anticipates receiving $47 million in revenue this year from property taxes, state aid and other sources, a 4.9 per cent increase from last year's $45 million.

Included in the revenue projections is $11 million from state aid, a 14.4 per cent increase from the $9.8 million received last year. The district also expects to receive $28.7 million from property taxes.

A breakdown of the budget by the five major funds — the education, building, transportation, bond and interest, and municipal retirement funds — will not be available until the board meeting.

The board will review the budget and set the date for a public hearing at 8 p.m. Monday at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

40% reduction in electricity use

IBI, Edison investigate meter tampering

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Reports of tampering with Commonwealth Edison Co. electric meters throughout the Chicago metropolitan area are being probed by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation. The Herald has learned.

Robert W. Banks, an agent in the IBI's special investigations division, disclosed few specifics and refused to say when the investigation began. Banks said, however, the "active investigation regarding meter tampering" — sought by Commonwealth Edison — encompasses Chicago and its suburbs. "The Northwest suburbs are part of the Chicago metropolitan area," he said. Banks is heading the investigation.

Commonwealth Edison officials, reluctant to discuss the investigation, said the problem surfaced about March 1. "In our normal testing of meters we had come across a few that had been tampered with," said

See related story, Page 5

Jack J. Stephens, the company's district superintendent in the Northwest suburbs.

OFFICIALS SUSPECT meters are slowed down to record up to 40 per cent reductions in monthly electricity use. They estimated the annual loss to the company could amount to "thousands of dollars," but would not say exactly how much has been lost through meter tampering.

The company's electric meters are read once monthly at commercial establishments and once every two months in residential buildings. Commonwealth Edison serves nearly three million customers in Illinois.

"We found a lot of restaurants but not exclusively restaurants" with altered meters, said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in

Commonwealth Edison's meter department. Sachs said meter tampering is not confined to the Northwest suburbs. "It's the entire metropolitan area," he said.

Sachs said up to a 40 per cent drop in electricity use has been cited on certain monthly electric bills. He estimated the subsequent decline in the bill could net an annual savings of up to $10,000 for some restaurants, although the amounts may vary widely.

"The pattern on bills doesn't vary that much. It's easy to tell if there's a 25, 30 or 40 per cent drop in usage," Sachs said.

THERE ARE SEVERAL pieces of equipment on an electric meter that are adjustable. "The meter can be forced to misoperate," Stephens said. "The primary way, but not the only way it is done, is to slow the meter down."

Stephens said meter readers, although they are not experts, are the best detectors of tampering. "The meter men can work the dial and feel whether or not it's slipping," he said. "If it's slipping, someone's been in there playing around."

When asked if meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring, Sachs told The Herald, "Some of it may be. There are rumors that it's national."

"There are a lot of people around — electricians, for instance — that know what they're doing. It can be attractive to kids as well. It is not that difficult unfortunately. We can't have people doing this on an organized basis."

NEITHER COMMONWEALTH Edison official would confirm that the IBI is involved in an investigation. They said they were conducting their own "intense" companywide probe with the support of the Illinois Commerce Commission and a "professional" law enforcement agency.

"We have our own investigative forces, employees of the company, that can conduct an investigation if we direct them to," Sachs said.

The IBI has made no arrests, Banks said. He said if a suspect is caught tampering with electric meters he could be prosecuted for theft or conspiracy to commit theft. "If you had a meter in your home and you knew how to gear it down, you'd be using a lot more (electricity) than recorded," Banks explained, saying meter tamperers are guilty of stealing electrical energy.

For the most part, commercial meters are installed inside buildings. "If they're tampered with, there's only one conclusion," Stephens said. "It's your building." He said, however, it's impossible to prove meter tampering unless someone is caught in the act.

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Every American home has one stashed away in a closet somewhere.

It's a homeowner's guide — a colorful scrapbook of clothing, household goods and mechanical equipment.

Major department stores call them their merchandise mail order books. The average shopper calls them catalogs.

BUT PEOPLE LIKE Richard H. Nugent consider them an art form and much more than a convenient purchasing device. It's "art" because without that eye-catching appeal, the products don't sell.

Nugent, 61, has a vested interest in catalogs. He is president and founder of Nugent-Wenkus, Inc., an advertising art and photography firm based in Des Plaines that produces seasonal catalogs for stores like Sears, Roebuck & Co., Aldens and Jewel Food Stores.

His job, even 30 years after he started the company, still compares with that of a movie or theater director who strives for the perfect scene, who is the master of illusion.

The company's headquarters, 1100 Northwest Hwy., is a former greenhouse that contains a busy collage of prop storage rooms, film studios and dark rooms, artists, seamstresses, carpenters and photographers.

THE EFFORTS of about 100 employees there contribute to making things such as bath towels, folded and stacked in catalog pictures, seem fluffy as possible.

They are experts at making merchandise look picture perfect. Curtains are pressed and uniformly pinned in place, bedspreads and throw rugs are padded for softness, and even clothes on dolls are ironed and their curly locks brushed.

Producing catalog pictures is far different today than it was in the 1930s when Nugent, then a novice illustrator, used his talents to sketch pictures of sale products for catalogs.

"Those were the days of early photography. We drew everything for advertising purposes so there was always a need for illustrators. It was very intricate work," Nugent said. "There was a lot of fooling you could do with a pen that you can't do with a camera."

But, the pace of business today demands the use of a camera, he said, and the production of catalogs has become very routine.

FIRST, CLIENTS AND salesmen design pages for the catalogs or special Sunday newspaper advertising supplements.

A color scheme is worked out for the display, the necessary props are ordered, the scene is set up and photographed. It is sent to the printers once the client has approved the picture.

The preparation of one ad, from start to finish, can take several weeks, and there are thousands of ads that fill an average fall-winter, spring-summer catalog, he said.

If the scene requires models, they are flown in from New York or hired from a Chicago agency. If the ad requires food, it is prepared on the premises.

BACK DROPS are painted and repainted, wall-papered and tiled to meet the specifications of the advertising layout, Nugent said.

About 30 different room scenes, used in advertising dining room sets or living room furniture, can be photographed simultaneously in the firm's gymnasium-size gallery. The scenes are constructed and torn down within several days' time.

Sale merchandise and props used in the making of the ads are stacked high to the ceiling on storage shelves. Furniture, fake fireplaces, doorways, rolls of carpeting, racks of drapery and bathtubs are stored in a warehouse after use, he said.

"The toughest part about this job is getting rid of the stuff afterwards," Nugent said.

BUT, THE EASIEST part of the job has to be when clients are willing to pay for Nugent and his film crew to take pictures of their outdoor sports and camping equipment, clothing and other items in a Florida or West Coast setting.

The company was located in what was once the Paradise Ballroom on Chicago's South Side before moving out to Des Plaines nine years ago at about the same time Joseph C. Wenkus joined up as executive vice president to handle the company's personnel and financial matters, Nugent said.

"My heart is still in the production end of the business," he said. "The people in this business still interest me the most. We have an awful lot of fun at this."

For lower electric bills

Man offers to 'adjust' meters

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Mount Prospect merchants have been approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters in what Commonwealth Edison Co. officials believe is a major meter tampering scheme in the area.

Utility company officials also have said electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of that scheme. The company, however, would not release the names of the restaurants.

Two downtown merchants, when asked if they wanted their meters fixed, refused the offer.

"IT WOULD HAVE been stupid," said Edward Pung, owner of the Town Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St. Pung said a man calling himself John P. Jones was doing some electrical work in the snack shop prior to its opening in March. "He asked me if I wanted to save enough to buy a Cadillac," Pung said. "He said it would cost me $30 a month."

Pung, a Wheeling resident, refused to have his meter tampered with and said he threw the man out of his restaurant.

Donald P. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St.,

said he was confronted in January by a man also named "John." Moss said the man told him "he had the tags necessary to set back both water and electric meters."

Moss, a resident of Rolling Meadows, said he was told his monthly bills would be reduced from $250 to $75 if he went along with the scheme. Moss also refused, saying his bills have only been between $60 and $70 monthly since his shop opened in February.

"I NEVER HEARD of it (meter tampering) before he came in here,"

Moss said. "I was impressed he could do it, but I told him I don't need his services. He told me we both could make money on it."

Commonwealth Edison officials have discovered up to 40 per cent declines in electric bills of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants. The utility said it has billed those businesses on a prorated basis to compensate for the monetary loss. It is impossible to accuse someone of meter tampering unless he is caught in the act, company officials said.

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

She didn't have a wagon to stand on but her pitch had a ring reminiscent of the old-time traveling medicine show barker. A cluster of curious potential converts was gathered around the woman, who was peddling ginseng tea at the Chicago Trade Exposition.

Ginseng appears to be the latest health food fad to sweep the country. Yet the term "latest fad" seems somehow inappropriate to describe a root that has been used by the Chinese for medicinal purposes since ancient times.

Today

It is touted as a cure for stress, nervousness, sexual impotency, heart disease, heartburn, high blood pressure, tiredness, depression, insomnia, double vision, diarrhea, constipation, creaking joints, gray hair, baldness, old age and just about any other complaint you might have.

A decision from owners of the Woodfield Hockey Center is expected today on a proposed shared staffing agreement with the Hoffman Estates Park District.

Park Director Allen Binder said Friday he was waiting for a decision by the facility's owners on whether they will accept part-time recreation help and advice for the hockey center.

Club purchase planned by new residents group

A group of local residents has formed an association to purchase a private swimming pool and tennis club built in Schaumburg's Sheffield Park subdivision several years ago by Levitt Residential Properties, Inc.

"We are entering the early stages of negotiations with Levitt, and we have a commitment for bank financing," Judson Hoffmann, of the Sheffield Park, Swim and Racquet Club Assn., said Friday.

Hoffmann said the association leased the nearly five-acre Springinsguth Road club from the builder and has been "successfully" operating the facility this summer.

HOFFMAN SAID the association is seeking a maximum of 200 members who will pay an initial $100 membership fee and annual dues of approximately $125. Membership is open to residents of Schaumburg Township, he said.

Last year, the builder offered the club to the residents for $50,000. Hoffmann said the "offer still stands" though members of the association hope to lower the price through negotiations.

The park board proposal offers several salaried and volunteer park employees as advisors to owners of the hockey center in providing recreational programs for Hoffman Estates residents.

THE PRINCIPAL potential use of the facility is as a home for the Flyers hockey teams, which are sponsored by the park district. The park proposal suggests that hockey leaders would be available as volunteers to plan hockey programs in the center.

Park board members have said the district will play no direct role in the center's finances.

In addition to the Flyers leaders, Binder would play a role in the center as a member of a management team formed to oversee the center's program and map changes for the future. Binder would meet periodically with center owners and a representative of the Colonial Bank & Trust Co., bankers for the center.

Binder said discussion on aiding the hockey center first started when center owners approached district officials with an offer to sell the facility. He said the center has had financial problems in the past and is seeking a way to stay in operation.

About school safety precautions

Nerge parents urged to consult county

Nerge School parents have been urged by the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education to direct their safety efforts concerning Nerge Road toward the Cook County Board of Commissioners and law enforcement agencies rather than the board of education.

Shirley Zawoyksi, PTA president of Nerge School, 660 Woodfield Tr., Roselle, said the PTA does not believe the board's decision to build a sidewalk on Nerge Road and to provide a crossing guard to help children cross the heavily traveled road are adequate safety measures.

About 200 children from the Sunset Hills and Meadows Knolls subdivisions next to the school will use the crossing.

MRS. ZAWOYSKI read letters from the Roselle Police Dept. and the Cook County Sheriff's Police stating that neither department has the personnel "to monitor the road in an adequate manner" concerning speed.

Board member Elizabeth Carpenter said she resents "organizations whose job it is to enforce the law writing letters to say they can't do that."

Mrs. Carpenter asked that letters be written to the Roselle police to ask for a crossing guard and to ask for "adequate supervision of traffic on Nerge Road when crossing of students will take place."

She proposed a letter be written to the Cook County Board of Commissioners asking that the Nerge Road speed limit be lowered from 50 miles per hour to 35 m.p.h. and that flashing lights be provided at the crossing. She asked that the letter suggest the county board begin a study concerning the installation of a stop light at the crossing.

BOARD MEMBER Margaret Pegerler agreed that the police "should not be let off the hook by making excuses about why they can't enforce the law."

Mrs. Carpenter said speed control, flashing lights and the speed limit are not under board of education jurisdiction.

"Help us get these necessary things," she told the Nerge parents.

The meeting was adjourned until Tuesday when the board will open bids for construction of the sidewalk on Nerge Road.

BUT, THE EASIEST part of the job has to be when clients are willing to pay for Nugent and his film crew to take pictures of their outdoor sports and camping equipment, clothing and other items in a Florida or West Coast setting.

The company was located in what was once the Paradise Ballroom on Chicago's South Side before moving out to Des Plaines nine years ago at about the same time Joseph C. Wenkus joined up as executive vice president to handle the company's personnel and financial matters, Nugent said.

"My heart is still in the production end of the business," he said. "The people in this business still interest me the most. We have an awful lot of fun at this."

Toddler class signup open

Discovery Montessori Center, Hanover Park, has opened registration for a two-hour Saturday morning class for 2-year-olds.

The class will meet from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the school, Irving Park Road two blocks west of Barrington Road.

The toddler class is considered preparation for the regular pre-primary Montessori program.

For information, and a brochure on Montessori curriculum, contact Mary Burt, registrar, 837-2699.

Owner of village car dealership dies

William B. Zimmermann, 67, of Chicago, owner of Northwest Lincoln Mercury, 1200 E. Golf Rd., Schaumburg, died Saturday night.

Northwest Lincoln Mercury will be closed Tuesday in memory of Zimmermann.

Services will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Original Weinstein and Sons Chapel, 2019 W. Peterson Ave., Chicago with burial in Westlawn Cemetery, Chicago.

Club purchase planned by new residents group

Levitt representatives could not be reached for comment Friday.

The builder opened the club in 1970 when Levitt houses were offered for sale in the subdivision and operated it until last year when the firm considered closing the facility because of lack of membership.

AT THAT TIME a number of Sheffield Park families purchased $200 season memberships, and the builder reconsidered and agreed to subsidize the operation for another year.

In Mount Prospect

Merchants approached by meter 'fixer'

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Mount Prospect merchants have been approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters in what Commonwealth Edison Co. officials believe is a major meter tampering scheme in the area.

Utility company officials also have said electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of that scheme. The company, however, would not release the names of the restaurants.

Two downtown merchants, when asked if they wanted their meters fixed, refused the offer.

"IT WOULD HAVE been stupid," said Edward Pung, owner of the Town Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St.

Pung said a man calling himself John P. Jones was doing some electrical work in the snack shop prior to its opening in March. "He asked me if I wanted to save enough to buy a Cadillac," Pung said. "He said it would cost me $30 a month."

Pung, a Wheeling resident, refused to have his meter tampered with and said he threw the man out of his restaurant.

Donald P. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., said he was confronted in January by a man also named "John." Moss said the man told him "he had the tags necessary to set back both water and electric meters."

Moss, a resident of Rolling Meadows, said he was told his monthly bills would be reduced from $250 to $75 if he went along with the scheme. Moss also refused, saying his bills have only been between $60 and $70 monthly since his shop opened in February.

"I NEVER HEARD of it (meter tampering) before he came in here," Moss said. "I was impressed he could do it, but I told him I don't need his services. He told me we both could make money on it."

Commonwealth Edison officials have discovered up to 40 per cent declines in electric bills of at least five

Mount Prospect restaurants. The utility said it has billed those businesses on a prorated basis to compensate for the monetary loss. It is impossible to accuse someone of meter tampering unless he is caught in the act, company officials said.

"To the best of my knowledge they have been billed," said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in Commonwealth Edison's meter department. "I don't know if we've received payment. Upon discovery of tampering we could immediately disconnect service. Service would not be restored until he pays what he owes us."

SACHS SAID the company is convinced meter tampering is a widespread problem and is not confined to Mount Prospect. He said there is little the company can do, though, unless someone actually is seen tampering with a meter. Sachs added Mount Prospect has provided some of the best leads to assist the firm in an ongoing investigation into meter tampering.

Ginseng not really new 'panacea'

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

She didn't have a wagon to stand on but her pitch had a ring reminiscent of the old-time traveling medicine show barker. A cluster of curious potential converts was gathered around the woman, who was peddling ginseng tea at the Chicago Trade Exposition.

Ginseng appears to be the latest health food fad to sweep the country. Yet the term "latest fad" seems somehow inappropriate to describe a root that has been used by the Chinese for medicinal purposes since ancient times.

The botanical name for the ginseng plant comes from the Greek word for "panacea," which is an understatement of the claims made for ginseng.

It is touted as a cure for stress, nervousness, sexual impotency, heart disease, heartburn, high blood pressure, tiredness, depression, insomnia, double vision, diarrhea, constipation, creaking joints, gray hair, baldness, old age and just about any other complaint you might have.

Advertising literature for ginseng quotes various studies, ranging from the plausible to the ridiculous, done in other countries including Sweden, Soviet Union, England, Switzerland, Germany, Bulgaria, Japan and the Bahamas. Last year many of these researchers gathered in Seoul, Korea, for the first international ginseng conference.

There apparently has been little

Three appointments expected

Manager search panel decision seen Tuesday

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer Tuesday is expected to appoint a three-member committee to search for a city manager.

"I hope to have an answer from the third person I have selected before Tuesday's city council session and plan to make all three appointments that night," Meyer said.

Meyer announced in July that Joseph Kiszka, deputy superintendent of Palatine Township Dist. 15, and the Rev. William E. Herman, pastor of the Community Church of Rolling Meadows, have agreed to serve on the committee.

"THE THIRD AND FINAL member of the committee will also be selected from the community and will not be a member of the city council or an elected official," Meyer said.

Meyer said selection of the committee from the community at large, instead of the city council "was a means of keeping politics out of the search for a city manager."

Residents voted last June to adopt a strong city manager-council form of government.

A major difference under the new form of government is that the city manager, rather than the mayor, will appoint department heads.

CHARLES GREEN, now acting city manager. He has held the position and that of finance officer since former City Manager James Watson resigned last October.

Meyer said although Kiszka and Rev. Herman have not formally been appointed they have begun accumulating background information to aid them in the search.

Kiszka has written to a manager's association and expects to receive from them the minimum qualifications expected of a city manager, Meyer said.

Meyer added that he no longer plans to appoint City Treasurer Robert Cole to the selection committee "because of my previous comments that I will not appoint an elected official.

"However, I believe Cole, because of his experience as our city treasurer and comptroller for another city, would be a valuable addition to the committee and would have much to contribute," Meyer said.

"I kept the committee at three persons because it's a better working arrangement, and the three who have been selected will contribute the necessary time," Meyer said.

There has been no opposition from city aldermen to Meyer's selection of Kiszka and Rev. Herman, but one alderman has suggested that an area city manager or one of the city aldermen sit on the committee.

2 robbers sell cigarets, then flee with $800

Two armed bandits paused in their robbery of a Des Plaines service station to sell cigarettes to a passing motorist, and then fled with more than $800 in goods and cash, police reported Sunday.

To add insult to injury, the thieves pocketed money paid for the cigarette by the unwary motorist, police said.

Police said two men, one armed with a small-caliber revolver, walked into the Martin Oil Station at 1962 River Rd. at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, and ordered the manager of the station to hand over cash.

The robbery was interrupted by an unsuspecting driver in a pickup truck, who pulled into the station and asked for cigarettes, police said. One of the bandits reportedly sold him two packs of cigarettes, and the motorist drove away.

Another car pulled into the station, and the robbers ordered the manager to tell its driver the station was closed. He did so, and another unsuspecting motorist drove away, police said.

The robbers had the manager open the station's safe, and they took a moneybag containing $776.45, and $13 from a coin changer, police said. Also reported taken by the bandits were two cartons of cigarettes valued at $7.46, and a calculator valued at $12.

The bandits took the manager to a backroom in the station, where they bound him hand and foot and fled, police said. The manager then freed himself and called police.

40% reduction in electricity use

IBI, Edison investigate meter tampering

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Reports of tampering with Commonwealth Edison Co. electric meters throughout the Chicago metropolitan area are being probed by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation. The Herald has learned.

Robert W. Banks, an agent in the IBI's special investigations division, disclosed few specifics and refused to say when the investigation began. Banks said, however, the "active investigation regarding meter tampering" — sought by Commonwealth Edison — encompasses Chicago and its suburbs. "The Northwest suburbs are part of the Chicago metropolitan area," he said. Banks is heading the investigation.

Commonwealth Edison officials, reluctant to discuss the investigation, said the problem surfaced about March 1. "In our normal testing of meters we had come across a few that had been tampered with," said

See related story, Page 5

Jack J. Stephens, the company's district superintendent in the Northwest suburbs.

OFFICIALS SUSPECT meters are slowed down to record up to 40 per cent reductions in monthly electricity use. They estimated the annual loss to the company could amount to "thousands of dollars," but would not say exactly how much has been lost through meter tampering.

The company's electric meters are read once monthly at commercial establishments and once every two months in residential buildings. Commonwealth Edison serves nearly three million customers in Illinois.

"We found a lot of restaurants but not exclusively restaurants" with altered meters, said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in

Commonwealth Edison's meter department. Sachs said meter tampering is not confined to the Northwest suburbs. "It's the entire metropolitan area," he said.

Sachs said up to a 40 per cent drop in electricity use has been cited on certain monthly electric bills. He estimated the subsequent decline in the bill could net an annual savings of up to $10,000 for some restaurants, although the amounts may vary widely.

"The pattern on bills doesn't vary that much. It's easy to tell if there's a 25, 30 or 40 per cent drop in usage," Sachs said.

THERE ARE SEVERAL pieces of equipment on an electric meter that are adjustable. "The meter can be forced to misoperate," Stephens said. "The primary way, but not the only way it is done, is to slow the meter down."

Stephens said meter readers, although they are not experts, are the best detectors of tampering. "The meter men can work the dial and feel whether or not it's slipping," he said. "If it's slipping, someone's been in there playing around."

When asked if meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring, Sachs told The Herald, "Some of it may be. There are rumors that it's national."

"There are a lot of people around — electricians, for instance — that know what they're doing. It can be attractive to kids as well. It is not that difficult unfortunately. We can't have people doing this on an organized basis."

NEITHER COMMONWEALTH Edison official would confirm that the IBI is involved in an investigation. They said they were conducting their own "intense" companywide probe with the support of the Illinois Commerce Commission and a "professional" law enforcement agency.

"We have our own investigative forces, employees of the company, that can conduct an investigation if we direct them to," Sachs said.

The IBI has made no arrests, Banks said. He said if a suspect is caught tampering with electric meters he could be prosecuted for theft or conspiracy to commit theft. "If you had a meter in your home and you knew how to gear it down, you'd be using a lot more (electricity) than recorded," Bank explained, saying meter tamperers are guilty of stealing electrical energy.

For the most part, commercial meters are installed inside buildings. "If they're tampered with, there's only one conclusion," Stephens said. "It's your building." He said, however, it's impossible to prove meter tampering unless someone is caught in the act.

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Every American home has one stashed away in a closet somewhere.

It's a homeowner's guide — a colorful scrapbook of clothing, household goods and mechanical equipment.

Major department stores call them their merchandise mail order books. The average shopper calls them catalogs.

BUT PEOPLE LIKE Richard H. Nugent consider them an art form and much more than a convenient purchasing device. It's "art" because without that eye-catching appeal, the products don't sell.

Nugent, 61, has a vested interest in catalogs. He is president and founder of Nugent-Wenkus, Inc., an advertising art and photography firm based in Des Plaines that produces seasonal catalogs for stores like Sears, Roebuck & Co., Aldens and Jewel Food Stores.

His job, even 30 years after he started the company, still compares with that of a movie or theater director who strives for the perfect scene, who is the master of illusion.

The company's headquarters, 1100 Northwest Hwy., is a former greenhouse that contains a busy collage of prop storage rooms, film studios and dark rooms, artists, seamstresses, carpenters and photographers.

THE EFFORTS of about 100 employees there contribute to making things such as bath towels, folded and stacked in catalog pictures, seem fluffy as possible.

They are experts at making merchandise look picture perfect. Curtains are pressed and uniformly pinned in place, bedspreads and throw rugs are padded for softness, and even clothes on dolls are ironed and their curly locks brushed.

Producing catalog pictures is far different today than it was in the 1930s when Nugent, then a novice illustrator, used his talents to sketch pictures of sale products for catalogs.

"Those were the days of early photography. We drew everything for advertising purposes so there was always a need for illustrators. It was very intricate work," Nugent said. "There was a lot of fooling you could do with a pen that you can't do with a camera."

But, the pace of business today demands the use of a camera, he said, and the production of catalogs has become very routine.

FIRST, CLIENTS AND salesmen design pages for the catalogs or special Sunday newspaper advertising supplements.

A color scheme is worked out for the display, the necessary props are ordered, the scene is set up and photographed. It is sent to the printers once the client has approved the picture.

The preparation of one ad, from start to finish, can take several weeks, and there are thousands of ads that fill an average fall-winter, spring-summer catalog, he said.

If the scene requires models, they are flown in from New York or hired from a Chicago agency. If the ad requires food, it is prepared on the premises.

BACK DROPS are painted and repainted, wall-papered and tiled to meet the specifications of the advertising layout, Nugent said.

About 30 different room scenes, used in advertising dining room sets or living room furniture, can be photographed simultaneously in the firm's gymnasium-size gallery. The scenes are constructed and torn down within several days' time.

Sale merchandise and props used in the making of the ads are stacked high to the ceiling on storage shelves. Furniture, fake fireplaces, doorways, rolls of carpeting, racks of drapery and bathtubs are stored in a warehouse after use, he said.

"The toughest part about this job is getting rid of the stuff afterwards," Nugent said.

BUT, THE EASIEST part of the job has to be when clients are willing to pay for Nugent and his film crew to take pictures of their outdoor sports and camping equipment, clothing and other items in a Florida or West Coast setting.

The company was located in what was once the Paradise Ballroom on Chicago's South Side before moving out to Des Plaines nine years ago at about the same time Joseph C. Wenkus joined up as executive vice president to handle the company's personnel and financial matters, Nugent said.

"My heart is still in the production end of the business," he said. "The people in this business still interest me the most. We have an awful lot of fun at this."

Merchants approached by meter 'fixer'

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Mount Prospect merchants have been approached by a man offering to "fix" their electric meters in what Commonwealth Edison Co. officials believe is a major meter tampering scheme in the area.

Utility company officials also have said electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of that scheme. The company, however, would not release the names of the restaurants.

Two downtown merchants, when asked if they wanted their meters fixed, refused the offer.

"IT WOULD HAVE been stupid," said Edward Pung, owner of the Town Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St. Pung said a man calling himself John P. Jones was doing some electrical work in the snack shop prior to its opening in March. "He asked me if I wanted to save enough to buy a Cadillac," Pung said. "He said it would cost me $30 a month."

Pung, a Wheeling resident, refused to have his meter tampered with and said he threw the man out of his restaurant.

Donald P. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., said he was confronted in January by a man also named "John." Moss said the man told him "he had the tags necessary to set back both water and electric meters."

Moss, a resident of Rolling Meadows, said he was told his monthly bills would be reduced from $250 to $75 if he went along with the scheme. Moss also refused, saying his bills have only been between $60 and $70 monthly since his shop opened in February.

"I NEVER HEARD of it (meter tampering) before he came in here," Moss said. "I was impressed he could do it, but I told him I don't need his services. He told me we both could make money on it."

Commonwealth Edison officials have discovered up to 40 per cent declines in electric bills of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants. The utility said it has billed those businesses on a prorated basis to compensate for the monetary loss. It is impossible to accuse someone of meter tampering unless he is caught in the act, company officials said.

"To the best of my knowledge they have been billed," said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in Commonwealth Edison's meter department. "I don't know if we've received payment. Upon discovery of tampering we could immediately disconnect service. Service would not be restored until he pays what he owes us."

SACHS SAID the company is convinced meter tampering is a widespread problem and is not confined to Mount Prospect. He said there is little the company can do, though, unless someone actually is seen tampering with a meter. Sachs added Mount Prospect has provided some of the best leads to assist the firm in an ongoing investigation into meter tampering.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley in June began his own investigation into possible tampering with village water meters after learning of the areawide scheme. Village water bills were checked as far back as 1972 and no significant drops were cited on the bills. "We're not seeing anything that looks suspicious," Eppley said.

2 robbers sell cigarets, then flee with $800

Two armed bandits paused in their robbery of a Des Plaines service station to sell cigarettes to a passing motorist, and then fled with more than $800 in goods and cash, police reported Sunday.

To add insult to injury, the thieves pocketed money paid for the cigarette by the unwary motorist, police said.

Police said two men, one armed with a small-caliber revolver, walked into the Martin Oil Station at 1882 River Rd. at 6:30 a.m. Saturday, and ordered the manager of the station to hand over cash.

The robbery was interrupted by an unsuspecting driver in a pickup truck, who pulled into the station and asked for cigarettes, police said. One of the bandits reportedly sold him two packs of cigarettes, and the motorist drove away.

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

She didn't have a wagon to stand on but her pitch had a ring reminiscent of the old-time traveling medicine show barker. A cluster of curious potential converts was gathered around the woman, who was peddling ginseng tea at the Chicago Trade Exposition.

Ginseng appears to be the latest health food fad to sweep the country. Yet the term "latest fad" seems somehow inappropriate to describe a root that has been used by the Chinese for medicinal purposes since ancient times.

The botanical name for the ginseng plant comes from the Greek word for "panacea," which is an understatement of the claims made for ginseng.

Today

It is touted as a cure for stress, nervousness, sexual impotency, heart disease, heartburn, high blood pressure, tiredness, depression, insomnia, double vision, diarrhea, constipation, creaking joints, gray hair, baldness, old age and just about any other complaint you might have.

Advertising literature for ginseng quotes various studies, ranging from the plausible to the ridiculous, done in other countries including Sweden, Soviet Union, England, Switzerland, Germany, Bulgaria, Japan and the Bahamas. Last year many of these researchers gathered in Seoul, Korea, for the first international ginseng conference.

PEBBLE STREAM APARTMENTS looms in the background of the Old Madrid project, 66 acres at Baldwin and Hicks roads, with two

'Swingin' single' life no longer complex's goal

by JUDIE BLACK

What once was a major point of contention among village officials, homeowners and developers has become an accepted part of the Palatine community.

Plans for the 66-acre Old Madrid complex at Baldwin and Hicks roads have changed drastically from their original conception. James Sellergren, developer and former land owner, envisioned a complex catering to the swinging singles night life, complete with bars selling liquor until 4 a.m., shopping centers, recreation facilities and four multi-story apartment buildings.

That was before the bottom fell out of the multi-family housing market. The renaissance of the Renaissance (formerly Old Madrid) has yet to occur.

"We would like to start our condominium developments, but the market's just not there," said Sellergren. "As to the shopping center, we're just not sure there is a real need here, with the upgrading of the Palatine Plaza (on Northwest Highway) and the Palatine Mall (on Hicks Road)."

THE LONE HIGH-RISE apartment building in the project, the 212-unit Pebble Stream, probably will be the only such structure. Under its former managers, the building had been criticized by nearby Northview homeowners for not maintaining an adequate security system and downgrading the area.

Even though the new management has not enlarged the security force, a more careful screening of applicants has been enforced to avoid repetition of early complaints. In April, the building was 80 per cent occupied.

Sixty-five per cent of the four office and medical buildings on Court Street also are occupied. Sellergren said the four buildings, each two-stories high, represent a good example of "developers, homeowners and village officials working together to get something done."

Sellergren believes the terms serving as a buffer between Northview residents west of the area and the office buildings are "too high." But the arrangement is "certainly something we all can live with."

SELLERGREN RECENTLY sold two of the remaining office lots to Melrose Park Savings and Loan Co. Sellergren has no plans to build more offices until the existing four buildings are completely occupied.

"As soon as we feel out of the woods (with the office rentals), we can start thinking of condominiums," Sellergren said.

The village recently issued $1.5 million in general obligation bonds to finance building Well No. 10 which will eventually service the Renaissance development and there have been various road and sewer improvements "that are just too expensive to ever give up the idea of building (421) condominiums," Sellergren said.

The developer is now in the last six months of a year-long extension granted by the village on various phases of the project. Sellergren would "like to get going" on construction, but won't proceed "until the market is there."

HE CAN envision a specialized retail and shopping area, perhaps with a small gourmet restaurant. He still plans for a mini-recreation complex open to all village residents on a membership basis.

Architectural plans for the proposed condominium buildings have been shown to appropriate village officials, Sellergren said, although their submission was not a formal application. Should he decide to move with the condo building phase, building permits would probably "take from three to four weeks," he said.

"We have a long way to go yet," Sellergren said of his changing development. "But we've come a long way, too, from some of the problems we used to have."

Changes to make law enforceable

Panel to review solicitor's code

Proposed changes in the Palatine solicitor's ordinance designed to make the measure more specific and enforceable will be reviewed tonight by the village health, safety and welfare committee.

The committee will meet at 7 p.m. at the Palatine Public Library, 500 N. Benton St.

The changes will be explained by Village Atty. Bradley Glass. They are:

- Eliminating the requirement that applicants for solicitor's certificates of registration submit to fingerprinting.

- Eliminating a section of the application requirements that call for "such additional information as the chief of police may deem necessary."

- Adding a section allowing charitable organizations to forego the normal application form if they agree to provide the name and address of the organization, name and address of the persons soliciting and evidence of compliance with state statutes on soliciting.

ALTHOUGH GLASS has declined to comment on the proposed changes, the measures apparently are aimed at making the one-year-old ordinance more legally enforceable.

The village is among 19 Cook and DuPage county communities whose solicitor's ordinances are being challenged by the Citizens for a Better Environment who charge the ordinances violate the constitutional rights of door-to-door salesmen.

The suit takes issue with the villages' power to selectively deny groups from soliciting.

The committee also will discuss the proposed 911 emergency phone system. The system, now in effect in Oak Park and Chicago, would enable residents to make emergency calls directly to police without dialing the normal seven digit number.

Officials from the Cook County Forest Preserve also will attend the meeting to discuss a plan to stock area lakes with game fish. The project would involve killing off existing fish in lakes and ponds so they can be stocked in the future.

The administration, finance and legislation committee will meet at 8 p.m. and the village board is scheduled to meet at 9 p.m.

40% reduction in electricity use

IBI, Edison investigate meter tampering

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Reports of tampering with Commonwealth Edison Co. electric meters throughout the Chicago metropolitan area are being probed by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation. The Herald has learned.

Robert W. Banks, an agent in the IBI's special investigations division, disclosed few specifics and refused to say when the investigation began. Banks said, however, the "active investigation regarding meter tampering" — sought by Commonwealth Edison — encompasses Chicago and its suburbs. "The Northwest suburbs are part of the Chicago metropolitan area," he said. Banks is heading the investigation.

Commonwealth Edison officials, reluctant to discuss the investigation, said the problem surfaced about March 1. "In our normal testing of meters we had come across a few that had been tampered with," said

See related story, Page 5

Jack J. Stephens, the company's district superintendent in the Northwest suburbs.

OFFICIALS SUSPECT meters are slowed down to record up to 40 per cent reductions in monthly electricity use. They estimated the annual loss to the company could amount to "thousands of dollars," but would not say exactly how much has been lost through meter tampering.

The company's electric meters are read once monthly at commercial establishments and once every two months in residential buildings. Commonwealth Edison serves nearly three million customers in Illinois.

"We found a lot of restaurants but not exclusively restaurants" with altered meters, said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in

Commonwealth Edison's meter department. Sachs said meter tampering is not confined to the Northwest suburbs. "It's the entire metropolitan area," he said.

Sachs said up to a 40 per cent drop in electricity use has been cited on certain monthly electric bills. He estimated the subsequent decline in the bill could net an annual savings of up to $10,000 for some restaurants, although the amounts may vary widely.

"The pattern on bills doesn't vary that much. It's easy to tell if there's a 25, 30 or 40 per cent drop in usage," Sachs said.

THERE ARE SEVERAL pieces of equipment on an electric meter that are adjustable. "The meter can be forced to misoperate," Stephens said. "The primary way, but not the only way it is done, is to slow the meter down."

Stephens said meter readers, although they are not experts, are the best detectors of tampering. "The meter men can work the dial and feel whether or not it's slipping," he said. "If it's slipping, someone's been in there playing around."

When asked if meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring, Sachs told The Herald, "Some of it may be. There are rumors that it's national."

"There are a lot of people around — electricians, for instance — that know what they're doing. It can be attractive to kids as well. It is not that difficult unfortunately. We can't have people doing this on an organized basis."

NEITHER COMMONWEALTH Edison official would confirm that the IBI is involved in an investigation. They said they were conducting their own "intense" companywide probe with the support of the Illinois Commerce Commission and a "professional" law enforcement agency.

"We have our own investigative forces, employees of the company, that can conduct an investigation if we direct them to," Sachs said.

The IBI has made no arrests, Banks said. He said if a suspect is caught tampering with electric meters he could be prosecuted for theft or conspiracy to commit theft. "If you had a meter in your home and you knew how to gear it down, you'd be using a lot more (electricity) than recorded," Bank explained, saying meter tamperers are guilty of stealing electrical energy.

For the most part, commercial meters are installed inside buildings. "If they're tampered with, there's only one conclusion," Stephens said. "It's your building." He said, however, it's impossible to prove meter tampering unless someone is caught in the act.

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Every American home has one stashed away in a closet somewhere.

It's a homeowner's guide — a colorful scrapbook of clothing, household goods and mechanical equipment.

Major department stores call them their merchandise mail order books. The average shopper calls them catalogs.

BUT PEOPLE LIKE Richard H. Nugent consider them an art form and much more than a convenient purchasing device. It's "art" because without that eye-catching appeal, the products don't sell.

Nugent, 61, has a vested interest in catalogs. He is president and founder of Nugent-Wenkus, Inc., an advertising art and photography firm based in Des Plaines that produces seasonal catalogs for stores like Sears, Roebuck & Co., Aldens and Jewel Food Stores.

His job, even 30 years after he started the company, still compares with that of a movie or theater director who strives for the perfect scene, who is the master of illusion.

The company's headquarters, 1100 Northwest Hwy., is a former greenhouse that contains a busy collage of prop storage rooms, film studios and dark rooms, artists, seamstresses, carpenters and photographers.

THE EFFORTS of about 100 employees there contribute to making things such as bath towels, folded and stacked in catalog pictures, seem fluffy as possible.

Sale merchandise and props used in the making of the ads are stacked high to the ceiling on storage shelves. Furniture, fake fireplaces, doorways, rolls of carpeting, racks of drapery and bathtubs are stored in a warehouse after use, he said.

"The toughest part about this job is getting rid of the stuff afterwards," Nugent said.

Two homes hit by burglars, one ransacked

Burglars Saturday struck two Arlington Heights homes, taking only a purse and its contents from one house while ransacking another, police reported.

Police said burglars pried open a rear door to gain entry to the Joseph Loconte home, 19 W. Appletree Ln., between 8 and 10:45 p.m. Saturday and ransacked the entire first floor of the home and bedrooms on the second floor.

Taken were television sets, a stereo system, a coin collection and jewelry, police said. Police Sunday were awaiting a complete list of stolen goods.

Burglars cut open a screen on a kitchen window to gain entry to the home of Norma M. Strom, 126 N. Phelps Ave., between 11:30 and 11:59 p.m. Saturday. The thieves took a white purse containing $7 cash, a checkbook, a check cashing card and a drivers license, police said.

Utility company officials also have said electric meters of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants appear to have been tampered with as part of that scheme. The company, however, would not release the names of the restaurants.

Two downtown merchants, when asked if they wanted their meters fixed, refused the offer.

"IT WOULD HAVE been stupid," said Edward Pung, owner of the Town Gate restaurant, 10 N. Main St. Pung said a man calling himself John P. Jones was doing some electrical work in the snack shop prior to its opening in March. "He asked me if I wanted to save enough to buy a Cadillac," Pung said. "He said it would cost me $30 a month."

Pung, a Wheeling resident, refused to have his meter tampered with and said he threw the man out of his restaurant.

Donald P. Moss, owner of the With Style Beauty Salon, 14 N. Main St., said he was confronted in January by a man also named "John." Moss said the man told him "he had the tags necessary to set back both water and electric meters."

Moss, a resident of Rolling Meadows, said he was told his monthly bills would be reduced from $250 to $75 if he went along with the scheme. Moss also refused, saying his bills have only been between $60 and $70 monthly since his shop opened in February.

"I NEVER HEARD of it (meter tampering) before he came in here," Moss said. "I was impressed he could do it, but I told him I don't need his services. He told me we both could make money on it."

Commonwealth Edison officials have discovered up to 40 per cent declines in electric bills of at least five Mount Prospect restaurants. The utility said it has billed those businesses on a prorated basis to compensate for the monetary loss. It is impossible to accuse someone of meter tampering unless he is caught in the act, company officials said.

"To the best of my knowledge they have been billed," said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in Commonwealth Edison's meter department. "I don't know if we've received payment. Upon discovery of tampering we could immediately disconnect service. Service would not be restored until he pays what he owes us."

SACHS SAID the company is convinced meter tampering is a widespread problem and is not confined to Mount Prospect. He said there is little the company can do, though, unless someone actually is seen tampering with a meter. Sachs added Mount Prospect has provided some of the best leads to assist the firm in an ongoing investigation into meter tampering.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley in June began his own investigation into possible tampering with village water meters after learning of the areawide scheme. Village water bills were checked as far back as 1972 and no significant drops were cited on the bills. "We're not seeing anything that looks suspicious," Eppley said.

IBI, Edison probe meter tampering

by MARSHA S. BOSLEY

Reports of tampering with Commonwealth Edison Co. electric meters throughout the Chicago metropolitan area are being probed by the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, The Herald has learned.

Robert W. Banks, an agent in the IBI's special investigations division, disclosed few specifics and refused to say when the investigation began. Banks said, however, the "active investigation regarding meter tampering" — sought by Commonwealth Edison — encompasses Chicago and its suburbs. "The Northwest suburbs are part of the Chicago metropolitan area," he said. Banks is heading the investigation.

Commonwealth Edison officials, reluctant to discuss the investigation, said the problem surfaced about March 1. "In our normal testing of meters we had come across a few that had been tampered with," said Jack J. Stephens, the company's district superintendent in the Northwest suburbs.

OFFICIALS SUSPECT meters are slowed down to record up to 40 per cent reductions in monthly electricity use. They estimated the annual loss to the company could amount to "thousands of dollars," but would not say exactly how much has been lost through meter tampering.

The company's electric meters are read once monthly at commercial establishments and once every two months in residential buildings. Commonwealth Edison serves nearly three million customers in Illinois.

"We found a lot of restaurants but not exclusively restaurants" with altered meters, said Frederick M. Sachs, administrative engineer in Commonwealth Edison's meter department. Sachs said meter tampering is not confined to the Northwest suburbs. "It's the entire metropolitan area," he said.

Sachs said up to a 40 per cent drop in electricity use has been cited on certain monthly electric bills. He estimated the subsequent decline in the bill could net an annual savings of up to $10,000 for some restaurants, although the amounts may vary widely.

"The pattern on bills doesn't vary that much. It's easy to tell if there's a 25, 30 or 40 per cent drop in usage," Sachs said.

THERE ARE SEVERAL pieces of equipment on an electric meter that are adjustable. "The meter can be forced to misoperate," Stephens said. "The primary way, but not the only way it is done, is to slow the meter down."

Stephens said meter readers, although they are not experts, are the

At Randhurst

Village to open recycling center

A glass, can, paper and oil recycling facility is expected to open at Randhurst Shopping Center in September, said Scott Stains, Mount Prospect environmental intern.

In addition to providing large steel containers for recycling newspapers and glass, the center will be equipped with facilities for recycling aluminum and used motor oil.

Stains said the village has purchased a 300-gallon underground storage tank which will be topped with a funnel so people changing their own motor oil may dispose of it.

"We will be saving money and natural resources," Stains said. "There is no reason to bury it or continue to keep filling up landfills with stuff that's good."

DES PLAINES HAS a similar waste oil recycling center. It was installed in May 1975 on Oakton Street between Lee Street and the Soo Line R.R. tracks.

Mount Prospect's recycling center will be located in the northwest corner of the Randhurst parking lot. It is tentatively scheduled to be open Tuesdays and Thursdays from 4 to 8 p.m., Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 6 p.m. "It will be very controlled and it will be locked up when it's not open," Stains said.

The facility will be operated by non-profit civic organizations in the village which will receive a fee to be determined later. "We're giving them a piece of the action," Stains said. "Each group will control the center for one month, then they will rotate."

The village tried setting up a 24-hour seven-day-a-week recycling center at Mount Prospect Plaza in 1972. That unmanned facility was forced to close because of its lack of supervision.

"I imagine they also had a problem with stuff being scattered around," Stains said. "There also was a very high rejection rate for glass."

A RECENT VILLAGEWIDE survey showed 58 per cent of the 1,011 respondents would utilize a paper recycling center, 46 per cent a glass recycling facility and 40 per cent an aluminum can recycling center. Thirty-eight per cent were not interested in a recycling facility.

"The survey helped cement our plans," Stains said. "It reinforced the need for it."

Browning-Ferris Industries, a Barrington scavenger company, has contributed $3,000 for construction costs and fencing around the facility.

Hearings to begin on Rob Roy unit

The Prospect Heights Plan Commission will begin hearings in September on a proposed 550-home subdivision on the Rob Roy golf course.

Centex Homes of Illinois, Inc., unveiled plans for the development during a Prospect Heights City Council meeting June 21.

Centex officials have drafted a letter to the city council outlining terms for a possible preannexation agreement that would bring the 200-acre golf course into the city limits.

THE PLAN commission will review preliminary plans and conduct a public hearing on the proposed development before recommending that the city council take any action, said Ald. John Fedyski, who is working with the plan commission on the project.

No hearing date has been set.

"Centex is just looking to us for direction on which way they should proceed. The city is not committing itself to anything. We are just saying we will look at their plans and hold public hearings on them to see how residents feel about the project," Fedyski said.

Centex officials propose building ranch-style and two-story houses and selling them for about $70,000 each.

Rolf Campbell and Associates, project planners, have said the lots will be between 8,500 and 10,000 square feet. The proposed streets and cul-de-sacs would be constructed without curbs, sidewalks or storm sewers.

ABOUT 25 acres of the project would be open space, half of which is located in a flood plain that would be used for water retention.

Entrances to the development would be from Euclid Avenue on the south, Camp McDonald Road on the north and Wheeling Road on the west.

The area would be serviced by the Old Town Sanitary District, River Trails Elementary School Dist. 26 and the Prospect Heights Rural Fire District.

Water service would be provided by the Citizens Utility Co. under an agreement between the company and Centex, officials have said.

"Centex is expected to do a complete environmental impact study on how the development of 550 homes on that golf course is going to effect the water and sewer systems and traffic and traffic in Prospect Heights", Fedyski said.

Picture-perfect catalogs — a form of art that sells

Photographer Norbert Badowski.

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Every American home has one stashed away in a closet somewhere.

It's a homeowner's guide — a colorful scrapbook of clothing, household goods and mechanical equipment.

Major department stores call them their merchandise mail order books. The average shopper calls them catalogs.

BUT PEOPLE LIKE Richard H. Nugent consider them an art form and much more than a convenient purchasing device. It's "art" because without that eye-catching appeal, the products don't sell.

Nugent, 61, has a vested interest in catalogs. He is president and founder of Nugent-Wenckus, Inc., an advertising art and photography firm based in Des Plaines that produces seasonal catalogs for stores like Sears, Roebuck & Co., Aldens and Jewel Food Stores.

His job, even 30 years after he started the company, still compares with that of a movie or theater director who strives for the perfect scene, who is the master of illusion.

The company's headquarters, 1100 Northwest Hwy., is a former greenhouse that contains a busy collage of prop storage rooms, film studios and dark rooms, artists, seamstresses, carpenters and photographers.

THE EFFORTS of about 100 employees there contribute to making things such as bath towels, folded and stacked in catalog pictures, seem fluffy as possible.

They are experts at making merchandise look picture perfect. Curtains are pressed and uniformly pinned in place, bedspreads and throw rugs are padded for softness, and even clothes on dolls are ironed and their curly locks brushed.

Producing catalog pictures is far different today than it was in the 1930s when Nugent, then a novice illustrator, used his talents to sketch pictures of sale products for catalogs.

"Those were the days of early photography. We drew everything for advertising purposes so there was always a need for illustrators. It was very intricate work," Nugent said. "There was a lot of fooling you could do with a pen that you can't do with a camera."

But, the pace of business today demands the use of a camera, he said, and the production of catalogs has become very routine.

FIRST, CLIENTS AND salesmen design pages for the catalogs or special Sunday newspaper advertising supplements.

A color scheme is worked out for the display, the necessary props are ordered, the scene is set up and photographed. It is sent to the printers once the client has approved the picture.

The preparation of one ad, from start to finish, can take several weeks, and there are thousands of ads that fill an average fall-winter, spring-summer catalog, he said.

If the scene requires models, they are flown in from New York or hired from a Chicago agency. If the ad requires food, it is prepared on the premises.

BACK DROPS are painted and repainted, wall-papered and tiled to meet the specifications of the advertising layout, Nugent said.

About 30 different room scenes, used in advertising dining room sets or living room furniture, can be photographed simultaneously in the firm's gymnasium-size gallery. The scenes are constructed and torn down within several days' time.

Sale merchandise and props used in the making of the ads are stacked high to the ceiling on storage shelves. Furniture, fake fireplaces, doorways, rolls of carpeting, racks of drapery and bathtubs are stored in a warehouse after use, he said.

"The toughest part about this job is getting rid of the stuff afterwards," Nugent said.

BUT, THE EASIEST part of the job has to be when clients are willing to pay for Nugent and his film crew to take pictures of their outdoor sports and camping equipment, clothing and other items in a Florida or West Coast setting.

The company was located in what was once the Paradise Ballroom on Chicago's South Side before moving out to Des Plaines nine years ago at about the same time Joseph C. Wenkus joined up as executive vice president to handle the company's personnel and financial matters, Nugent said.

"My heart is still in the production end of the business," he said. "The people in this business still interest me the most. We have an awful lot of fun at this."

Dist. 214 to review budget today

A $48 million tentative budget for the 1976-77 school year will be reviewed by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education today.

The budget calls for a 6.58 per cent increase in expenditures from last year's $45 million budget.

The district anticipates receiving $47 million in revenue this year from property taxes, state aid and other sources, a 4.9 per cent increase from last year's $45 million.

Included in the revenue projections is $11 million from state aid, a 14.4 per cent increase from the $9.8 million received last year. The district also expects to receive $28.7 million from property taxes.

A breakdown of the budget by the five major funds — the education, building, transportation, bond and interest, and municipal retirement funds — will not be available until the board meeting.

The board will review the budget and set the date for a public hearing at 8 p.m. Monday at the administration center, 799 W. Kensington Rd., Mount Prospect.

Retired cop manages crafts shop

Kenneth Zschach, who recently retired from the Mount Prospect Police Dept. is now managing a jewelry and lapidary shop, Trowbridge Crafts, at Elmhurst and Camp McDonald roads, Prospect Heights.

Zschach retired after 21 years of police service and is well known in the village as a former youth officer. He became interested in lapidary art as a hobby and through purchasing materials and supplies at Trowbridge, he received the managerial position.

Ken's wife, Jan, whose hobby has been freehand machine embroidery, is teaching a class in decorative machine stitchery at Maine South High School and at Linda Z's Bernina Sewing Center at the Mount Prospect Plaza this fall.

ART IBBOTSON OF Ibbotson Heating Co., 109 E. Prospect Ave.,

recently retired after 28 years of service. Art and his brother Ralph started the business Jan. 1, 1947. Ralph retired five years ago.

Ralph's son, Ralph Jr., and Art's son-in-law, John Kelly, have assumed the responsibility of the business now.

Art Ibbotson is a former village trustee. He and his wife Marge have four children, Marjorie, Roger, Laurel and Jan.

THE MOUNT PROSPECT Junior Woman's Club is seeking new members by extending an invitation of "Come join us... we're just like you" to all area young women (there's no age limit). The organization has scheduled an "Afternoon With Juniors" at 1 p.m. Aug. 29. More information about the party is available from membership chairman, Donna Hooper, 394-2071.

Juniors work on fund raising projects to support scholarships, brain research, sudden infant death syndrome, cancer research and other needs of the community.

The club has regular meetings on the second Wednesday of each month from September through May at the Mount Prospect Community Center, 600 S. See-Gwun Ave.

THE GAZEBO FUND has now reached $868.38. The wrought iron fixture in the parking lot of the village hall, 100 S. Emerson St., is a Bicentennial project of the Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club. More money is needed to reach the goal of $2,500. Contributions may be sent or taken to Debbie Bluet at the Mount Prospect State Bank.

Postal worker receives award

Lee Bradley, a window distribution clerk at the Prospect Heights Post Office, has received the U.S. Postal Service's Bicentennial Award.

Bradley, 1 N. Elmhurst Rd., Prospect Heights, was given the award for creating Bicentennial window displays for the post office and for participating in recent Bicentennial events sponsored in the City of Prospect Heights.

Prospect Hts. students get degrees

Several Prospect Heights residents completed requirements for degrees at their respective colleges and universities. They are: Dennis Cornwell, Timothy Fortman, John Hudson and Daniel Zale graduating from Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Paul Meers received a BA from Illinois Wesleyan University... Kurt Miller was awarded a bachelor's degree in industrial management...

Robert Dudzik, Paul Gawry, Patricia Knupp, Gary Krieg and George McFarlin received degrees from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Michael Langeloh received a BA from Northland College where he majored in Geography and environmental studies... John Szymanski was granted an AA degree by Kendall College... Robert Golembiewski received a BA in business economics... John Sternberg was awarded a BS in civil engineering... Mitchell Brandau received his undergraduate degree from George Williams College...

best detectors of tampering. "The meter men can work the dial and feel whether or not it's slipping," he said. "If it's slipping, someone's been in there playing around."

When asked if meter tampering could be part of an organized crime ring, Sachs told The Herald, "Some of it may be. There are rumors that it's national."

"There are a lot of people around — electricians, for instance — that know what they're doing. It can be attractive to kids as well. It is not that difficult unfortunately. We can't have people doing this on an organized basis."

NEITHER COMMONWEALTH Edison official would confirm that the IBI is involved in an investigation. They said they were conducting their own "intense" companywide probe with the support of the Illinois Commerce Commission and a "professional" law enforcement agency.
